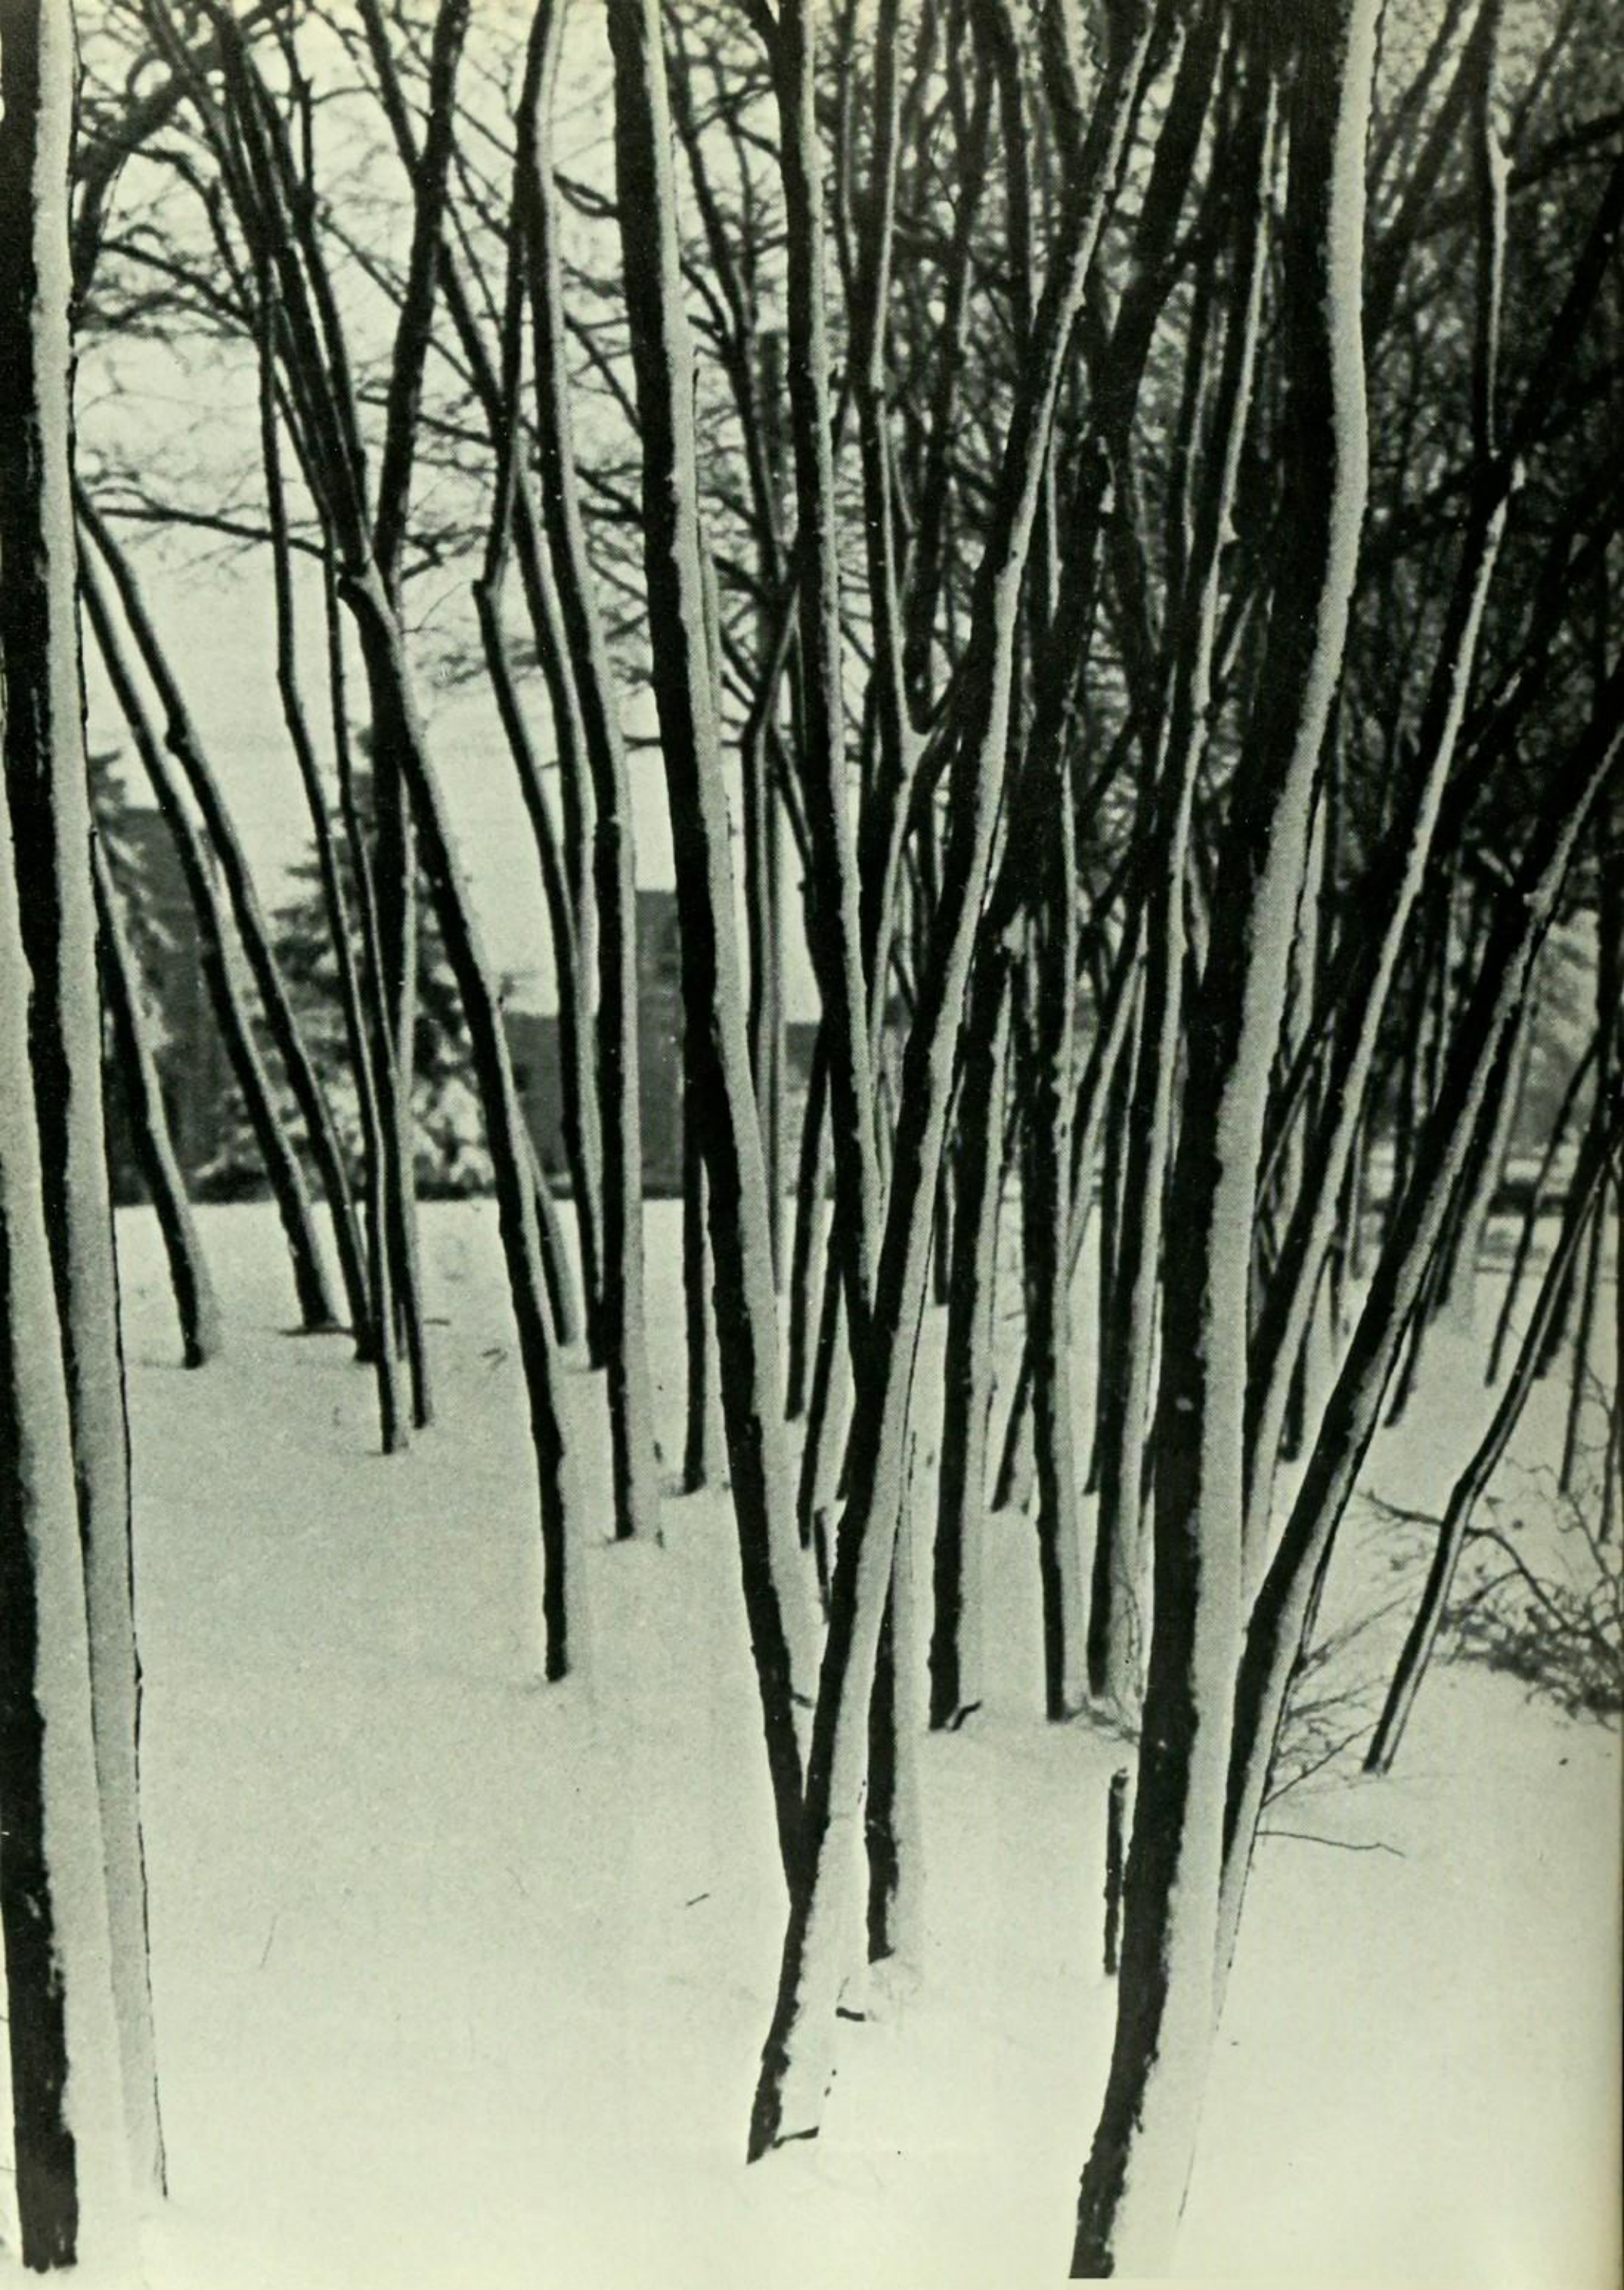
WASHINGTON PARK
HIGH SCHOOL
RACINE, WISCONSIN



A fleeting moment of time can be captured by the camera to last an eternity. These woods are majestic in their grandeur and do not escape glimpses from Park's students. These trees, like sentinels, have watched countless passers-by as well as many seasons, reflecting time in their concentric rings.

The seasons, comprised of experiences and emotions, mean something unique to every individual. They separate our lives into a simple natural sequence from the complicated world in which we exist. Here at school our lives also coincide with the seasons. In arranging this yearbook we have used seasonal dividers to relate a sampling of the year's activities: Autumn, with roaring shouts of football victories and footsteps to school through shuffling leaves; Winter, with echos of rebounding basketballs and icicle tinged roofs that accentuate the bitter cold; Spring, which marks a curious expectation of the approaching summer vacation and a new beginning of life. The images presented here will last forever coinciding with our never fading memories.

SOLITUDE
WALLS,
in its starkness,
encompasses the school.
echo in the emptiness,
to be heard by no one.
halls, and rooms —
unfamiliar with such silence —
cower in the stillness, waiting only to be INHABITED!

AUTUMN

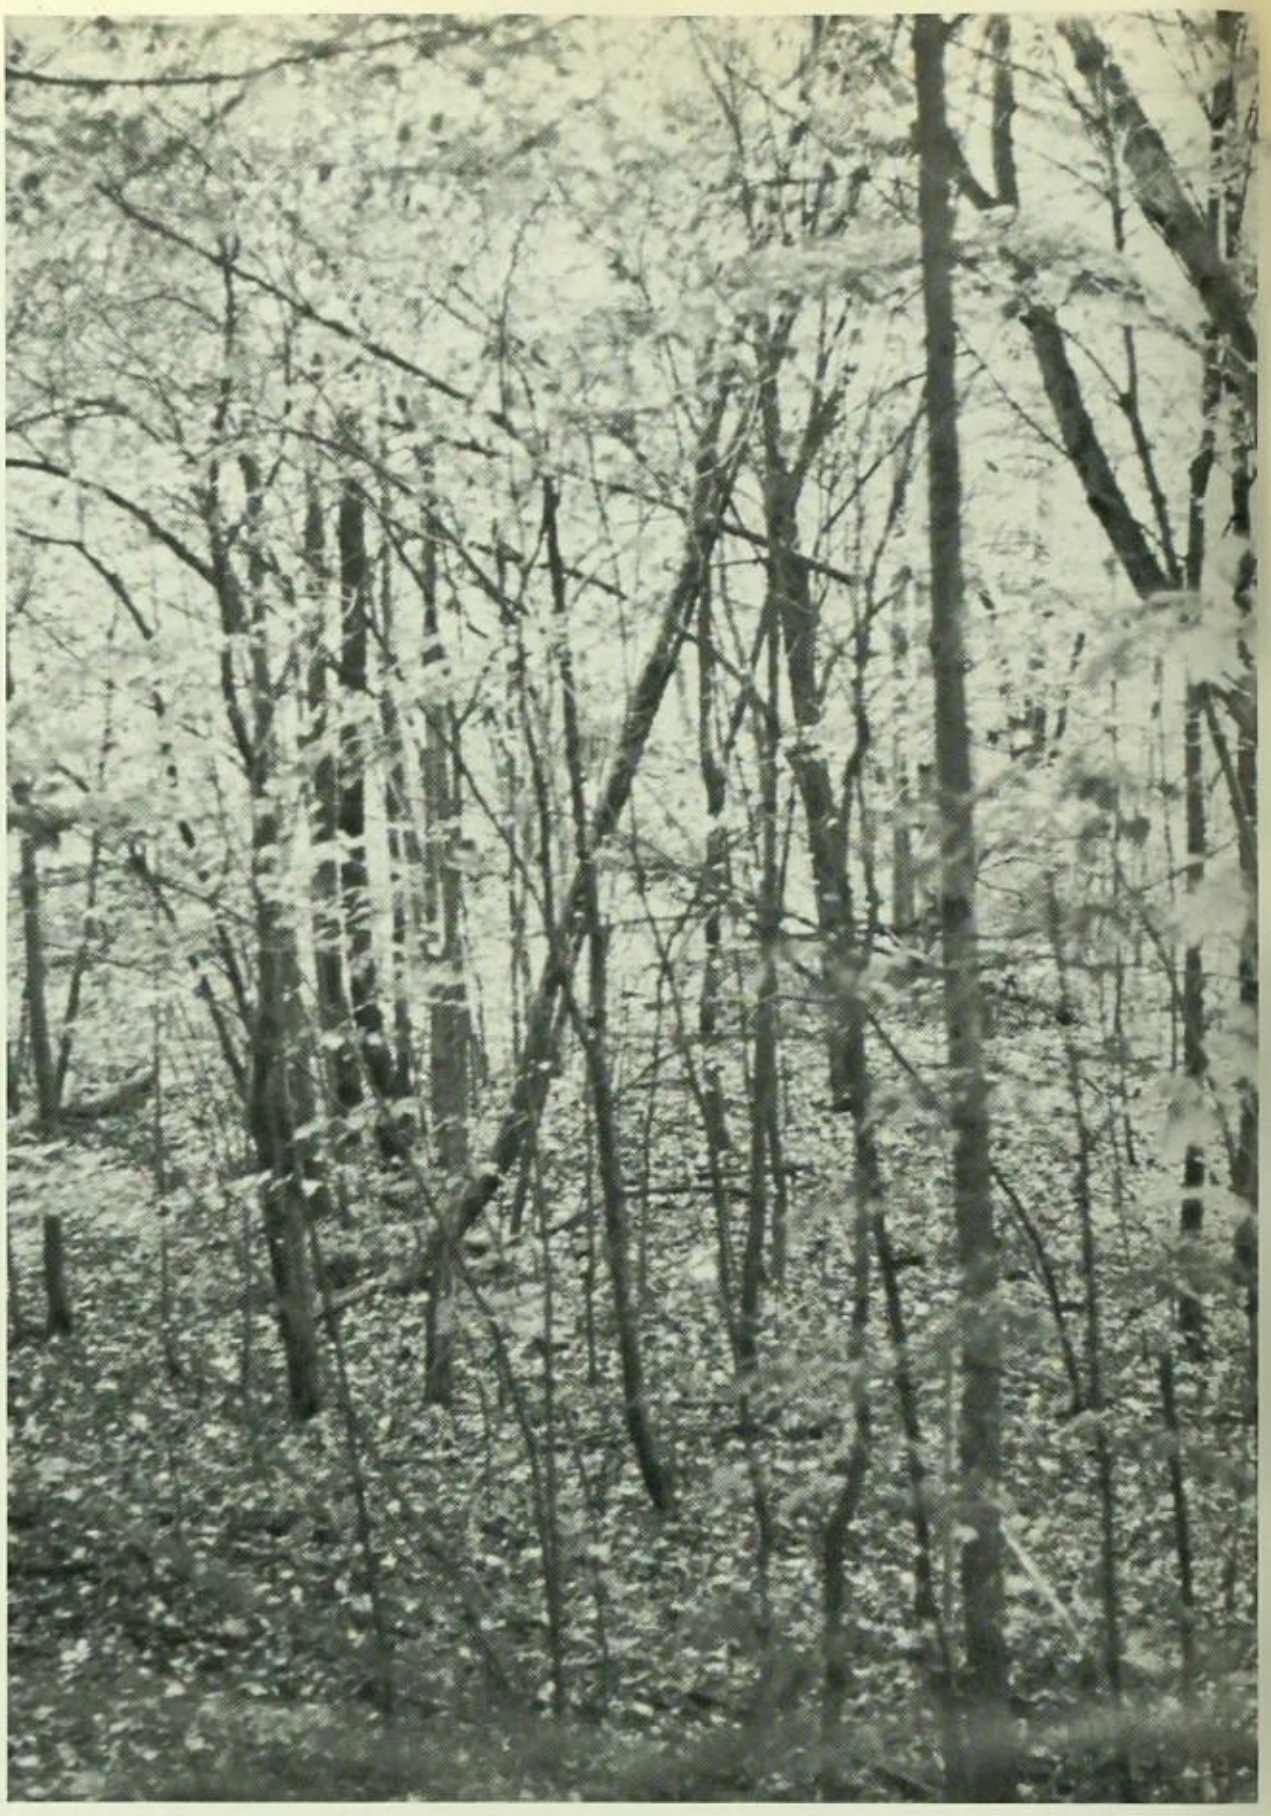
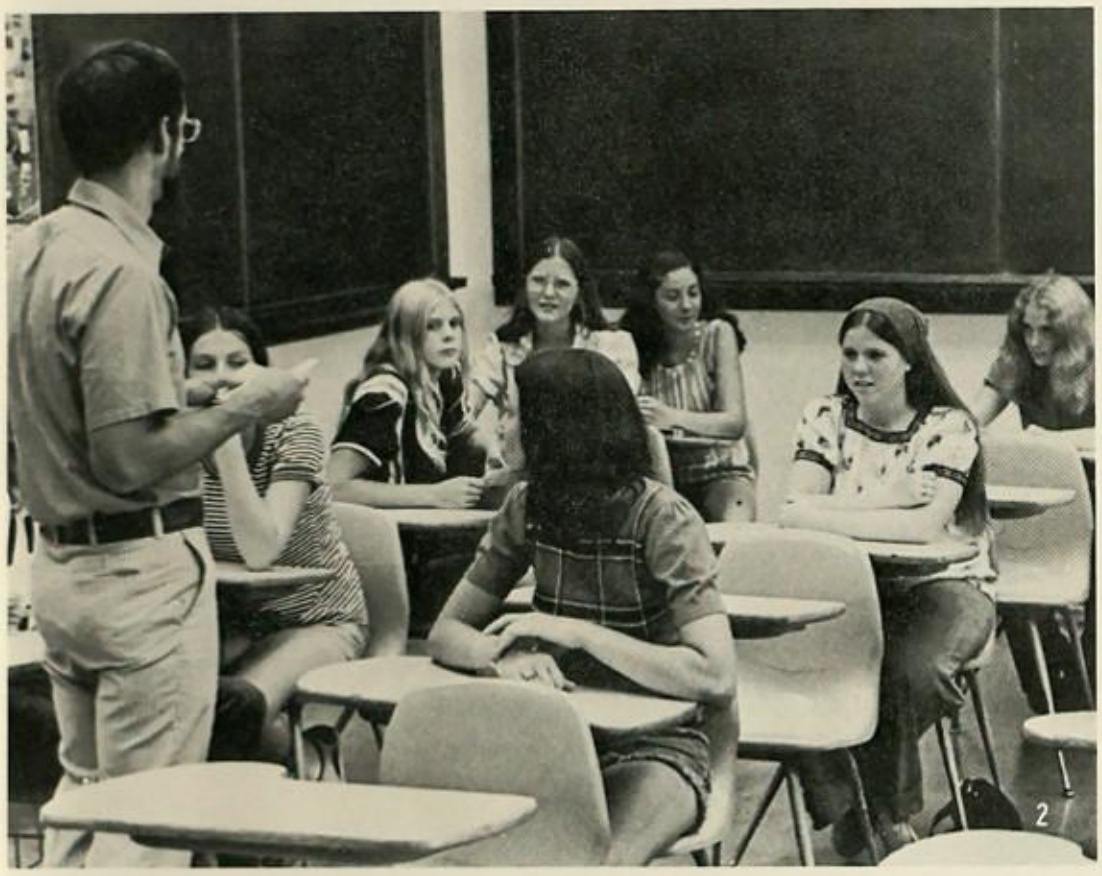
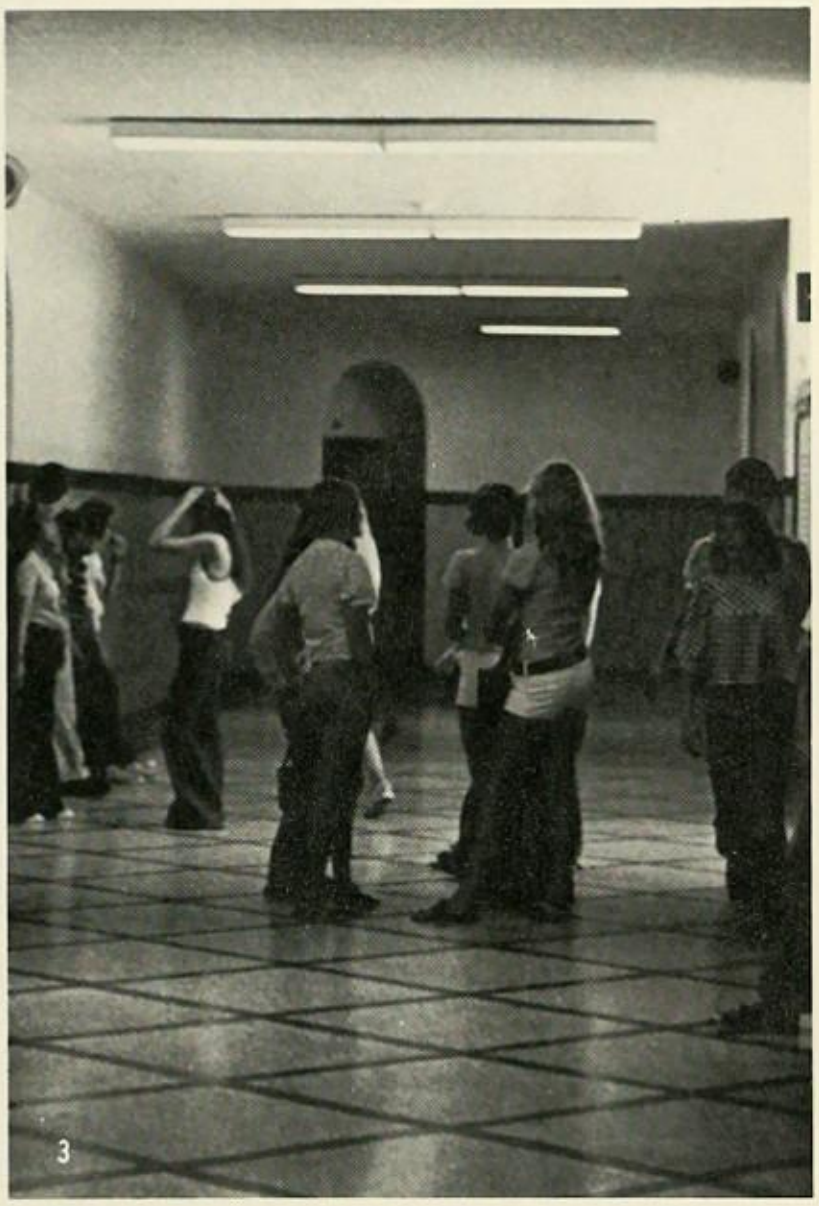
leaves.

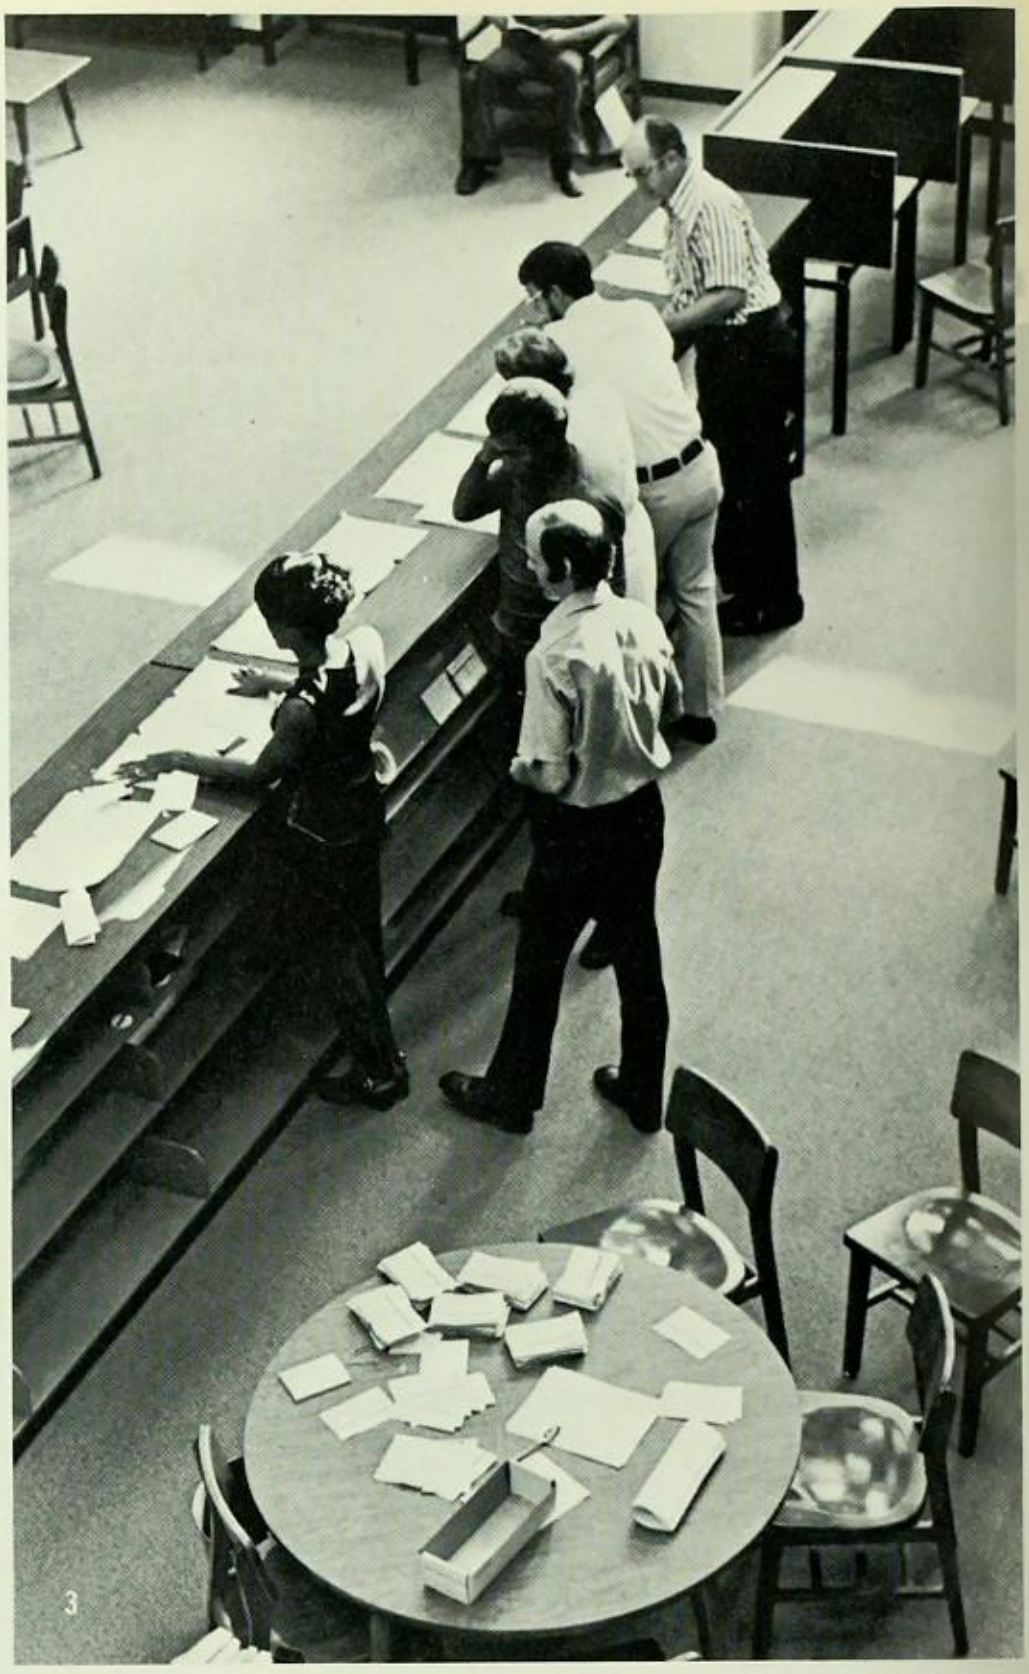


1. Yearbooks were distributed in the cafeteria the week before school began. 2. Experiences of summer were exchanged during lunch.

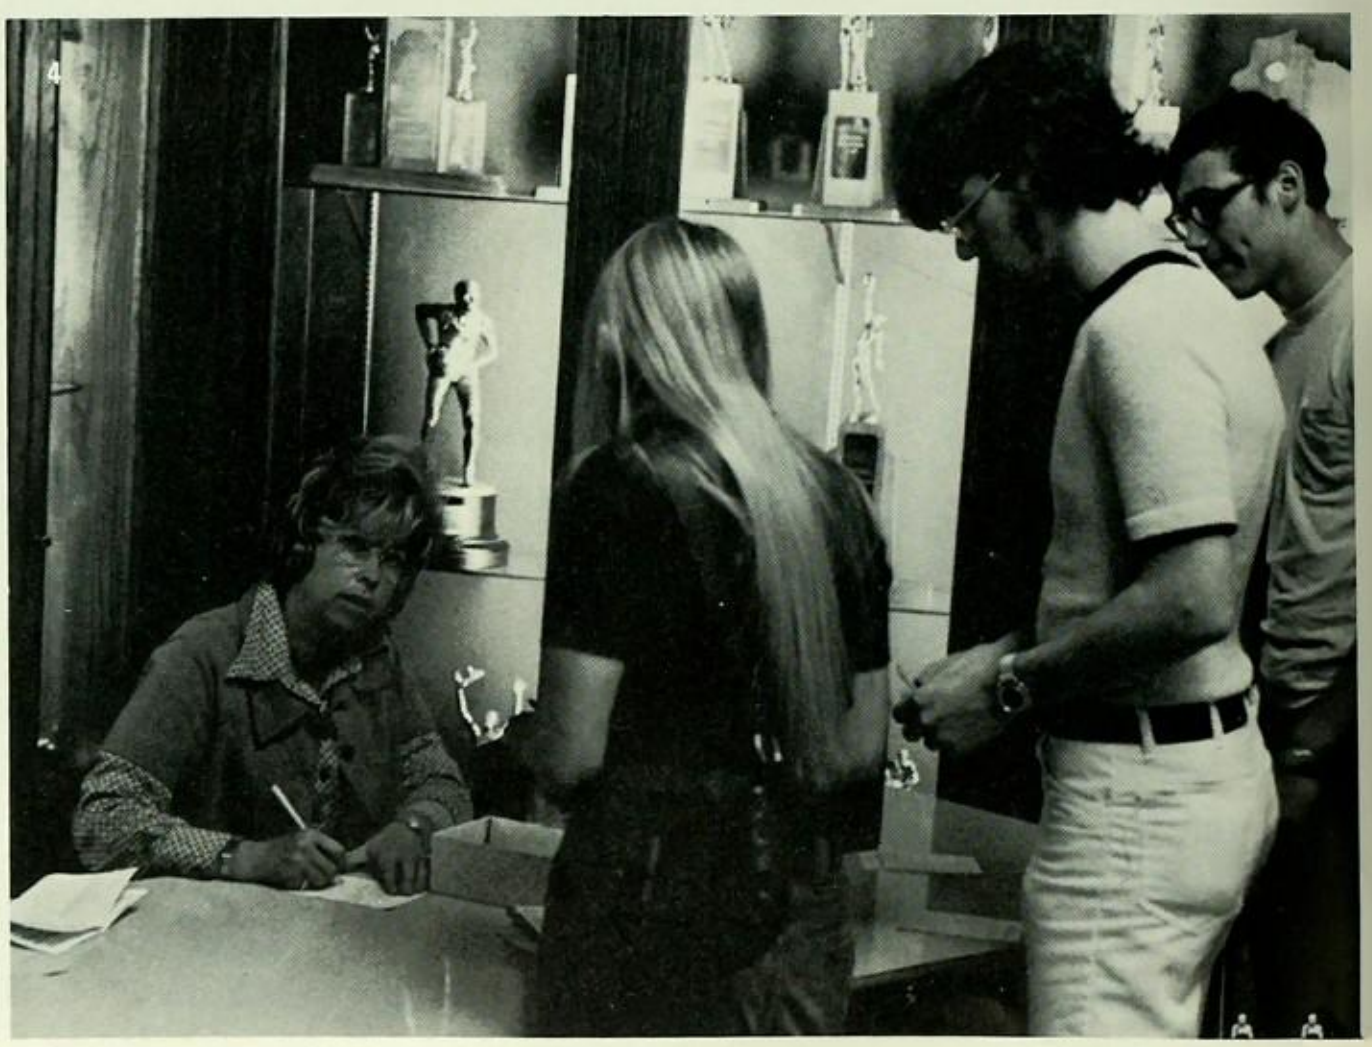
1. Speculative students encountered their first homeroom at Park. 2. Mr. Fugate briefed sophomores on where they could come with problems. 3. After a lazy summer sophomores adjusted to a different environment. 4. Bewildered sophomores awaited the beginning of their first class.

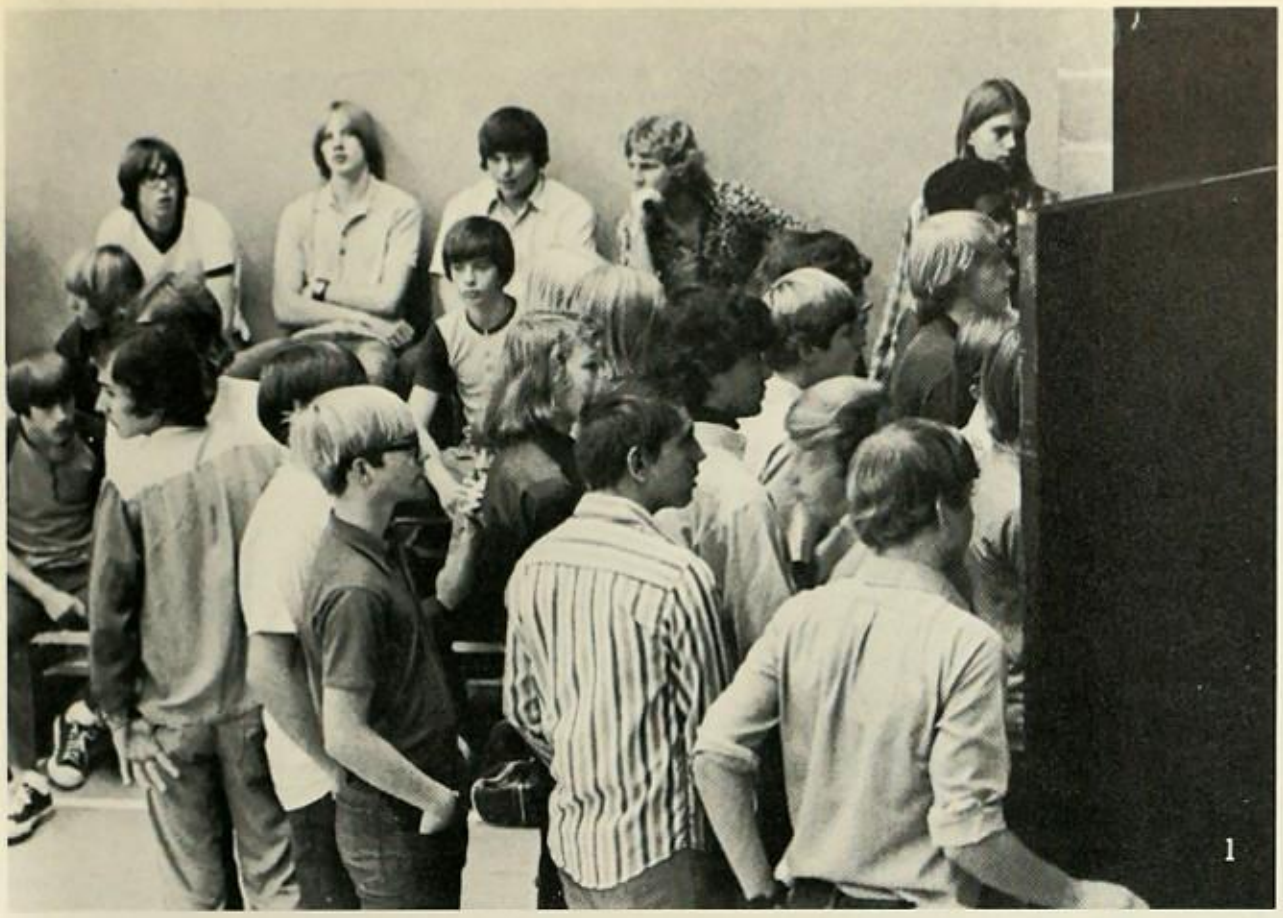






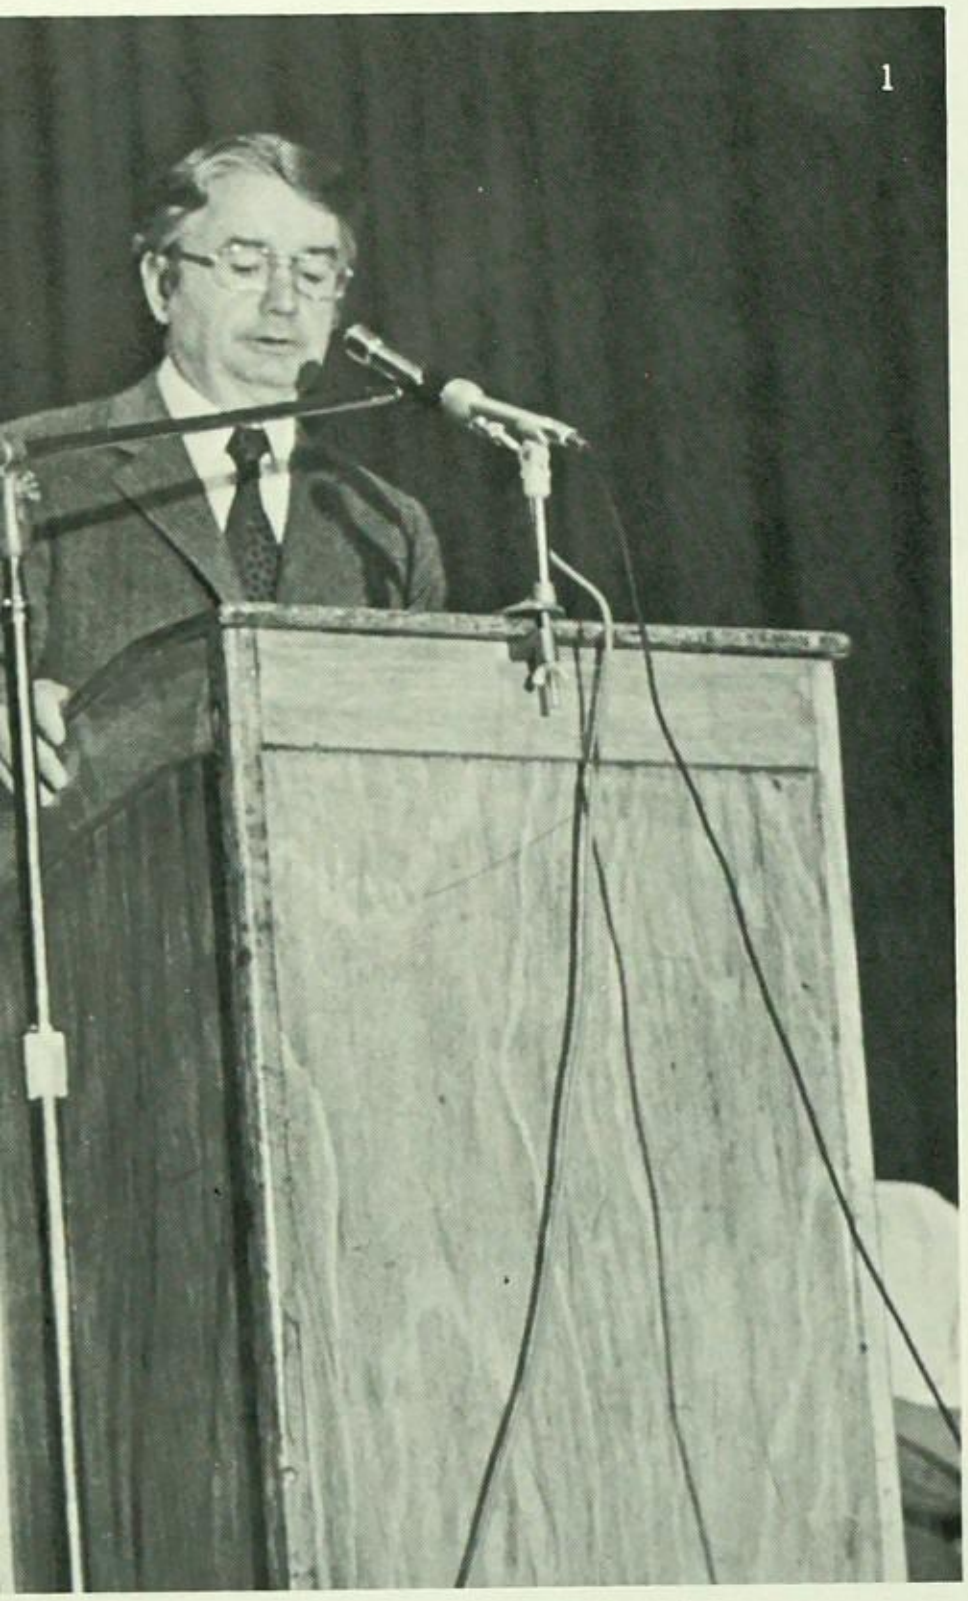
1. Sophomores began their high school days by picking up their ID's. 2. Mr. Kierstyn adjusted the ID Camera for a picture. 3. Counselors got ready for schedule change requests. 4. Ordering a ring early meant getting it before Christmas.

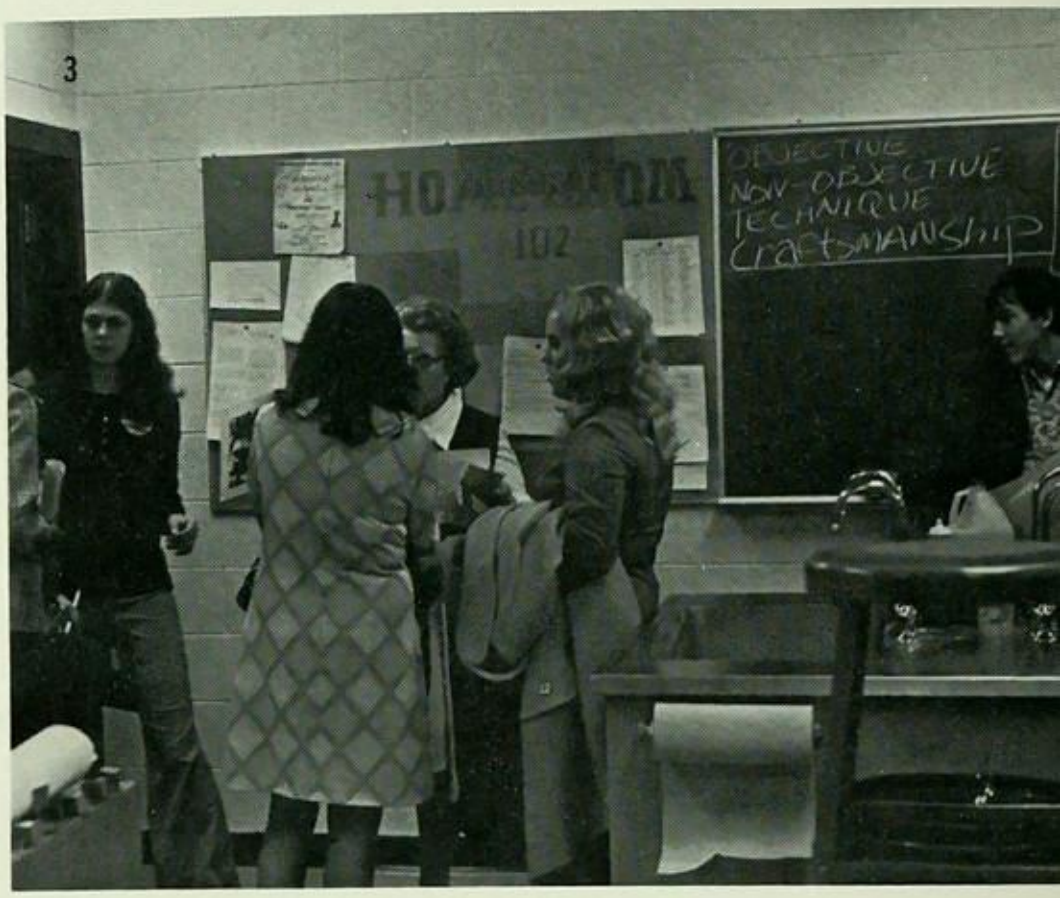




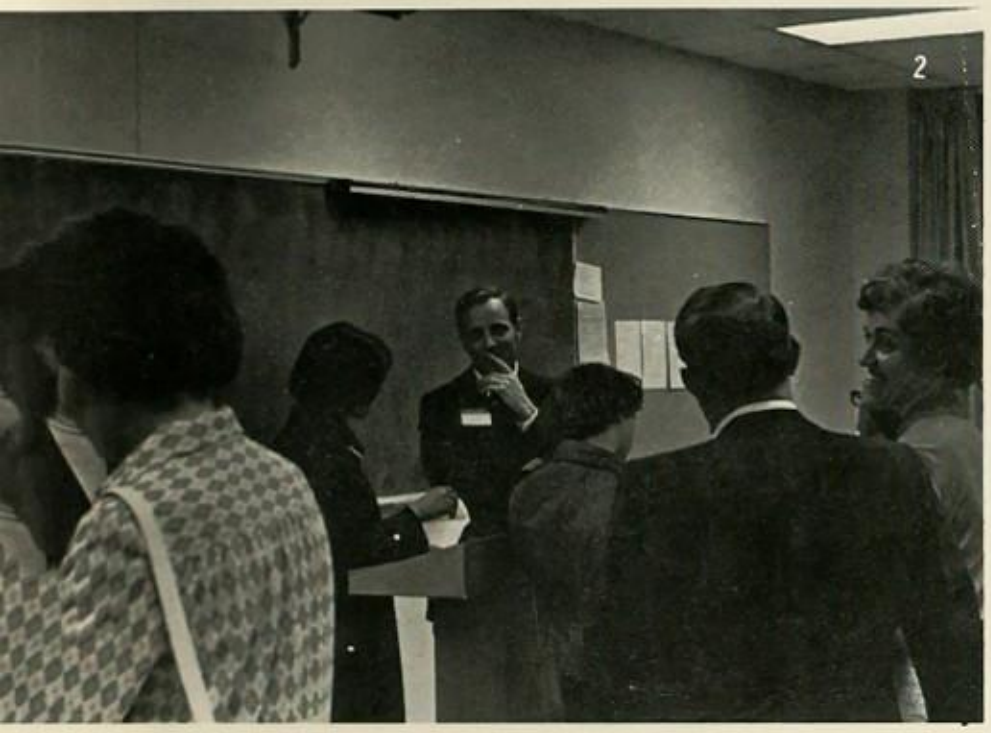
1. Gym was temporarily interrupted for underclass yearbook pictures. 2. An obedient sophomore sat to be photographed. 3. The Sophomore Welcome Dance brought more than just sophomores. 4. A rainy Monday morning started another week of school.

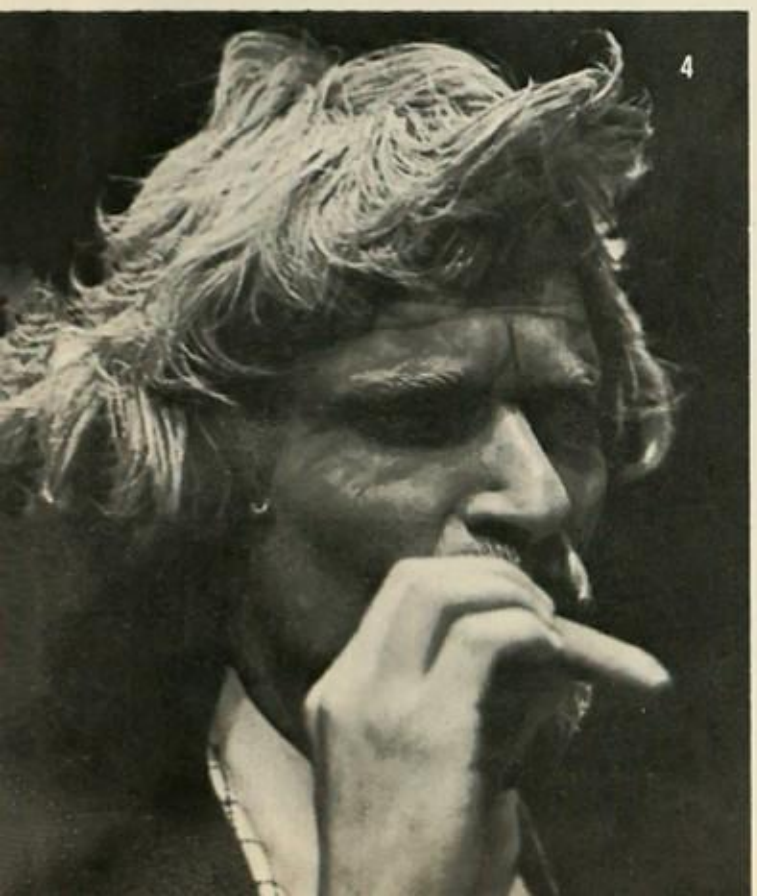
1. Governor Lucey spoke to an attentive audience. 2. Students actively responded to Governor Lucey's speech. 3. Parents explored Park's art epartment. 4. Parents had the opportunity to find out how their kids were ' doing. 5. Concert Choir performed for interested parents at Open House.

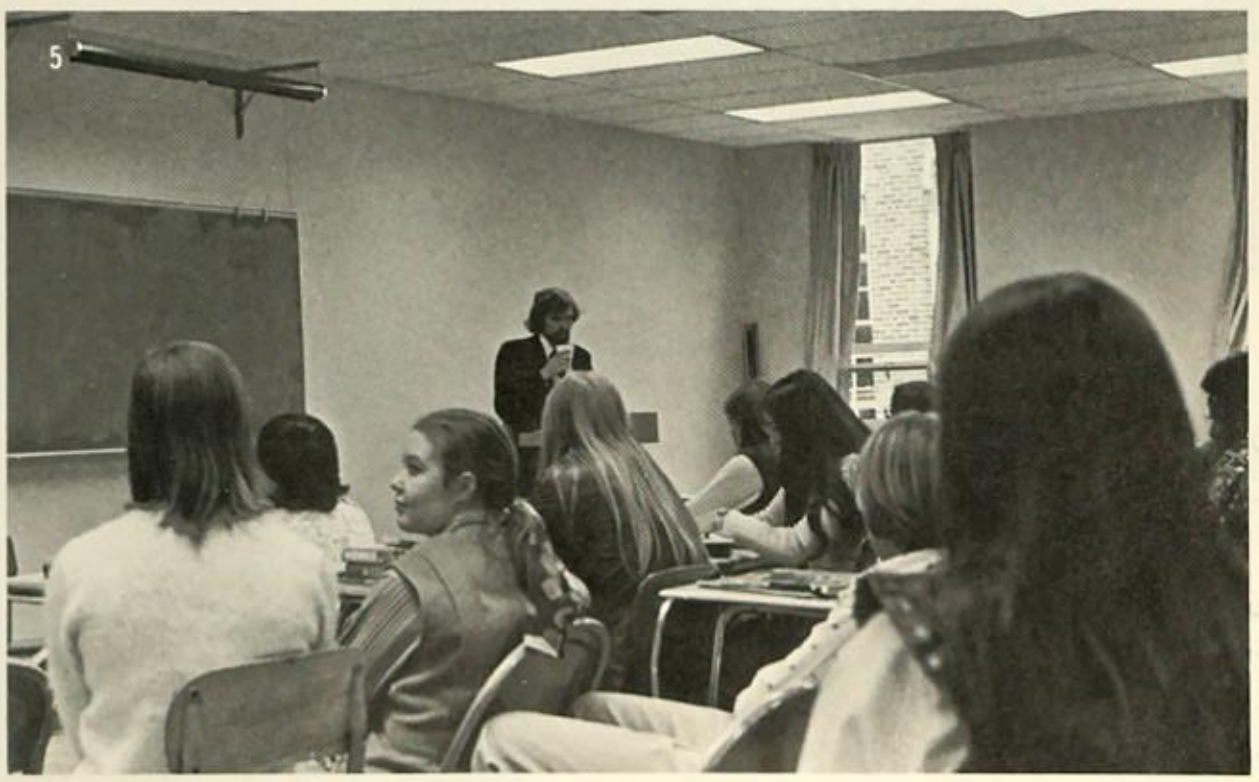




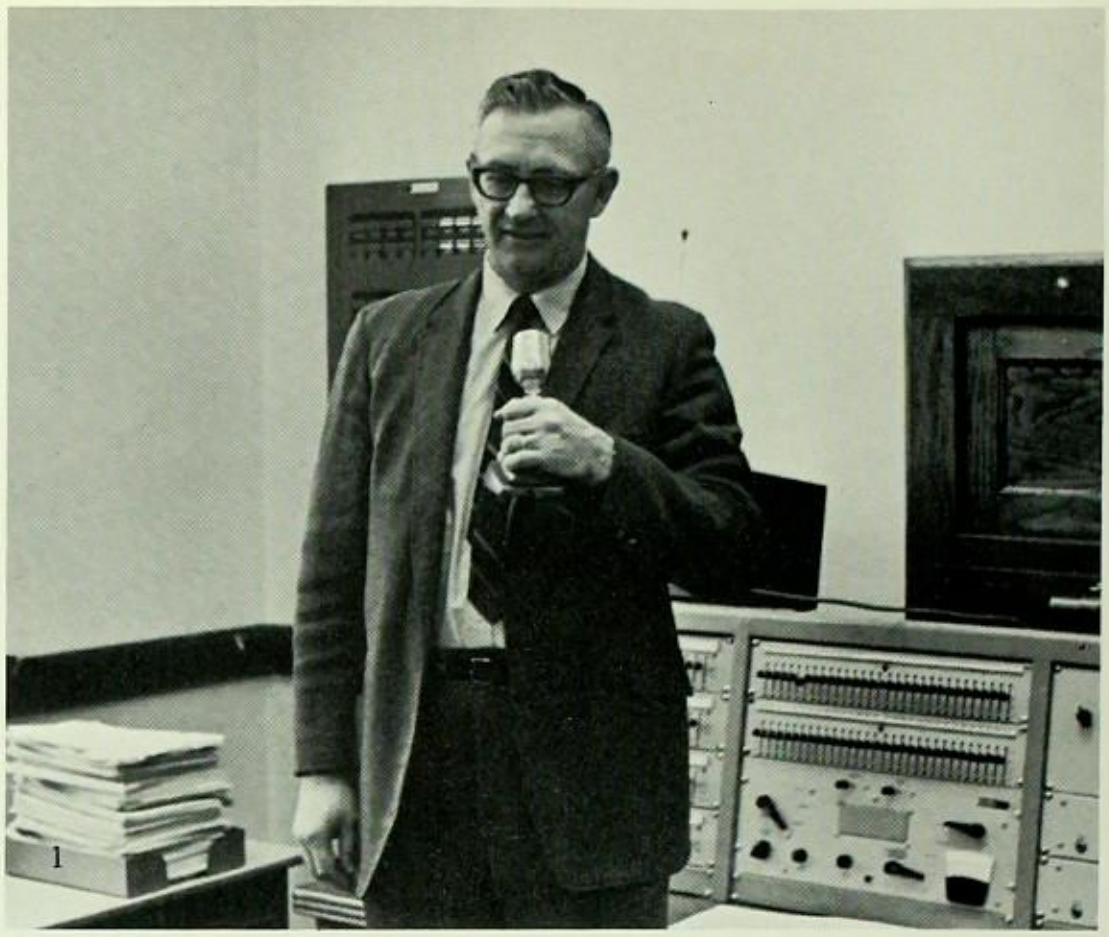
1. Many parents attended Open House showing concern for their children and school. 2. Mr. Kizewic welcomed parents at Open House. 3. Open House drew a big crowd. 4. Frank Marchant gave a realistic performance of Mark Twain to drama and English classes. 5. As Mark Twain, the actor revealed his dramatic techniques.







The Main Office and Activities Office work together as a team to perform the tedious operations of running a high school. Although the office staff receives little recognition, their part in running Park High is essential. Mr. Thompson and Mr. Stroupe cope with the difficult task of total school communication while also managing administrative problems, ordering supplies, planning sports schedules, keeping records, writing bulletins and completing the other complex tasks that go into the operation of a school the size of Park. With the help of the Main Office and Activities Office more uniform school communication has been established.



1. James C. Thompson, Directing Principal, talked on the P.A. during homeroom. 2. Mrs. Delores Svoboda answered the phone, one of her many duties. 3. Mrs. Mary Bullette pondered a question of SCA cards. 4. Many students received answers to their questions from one of the office workers.

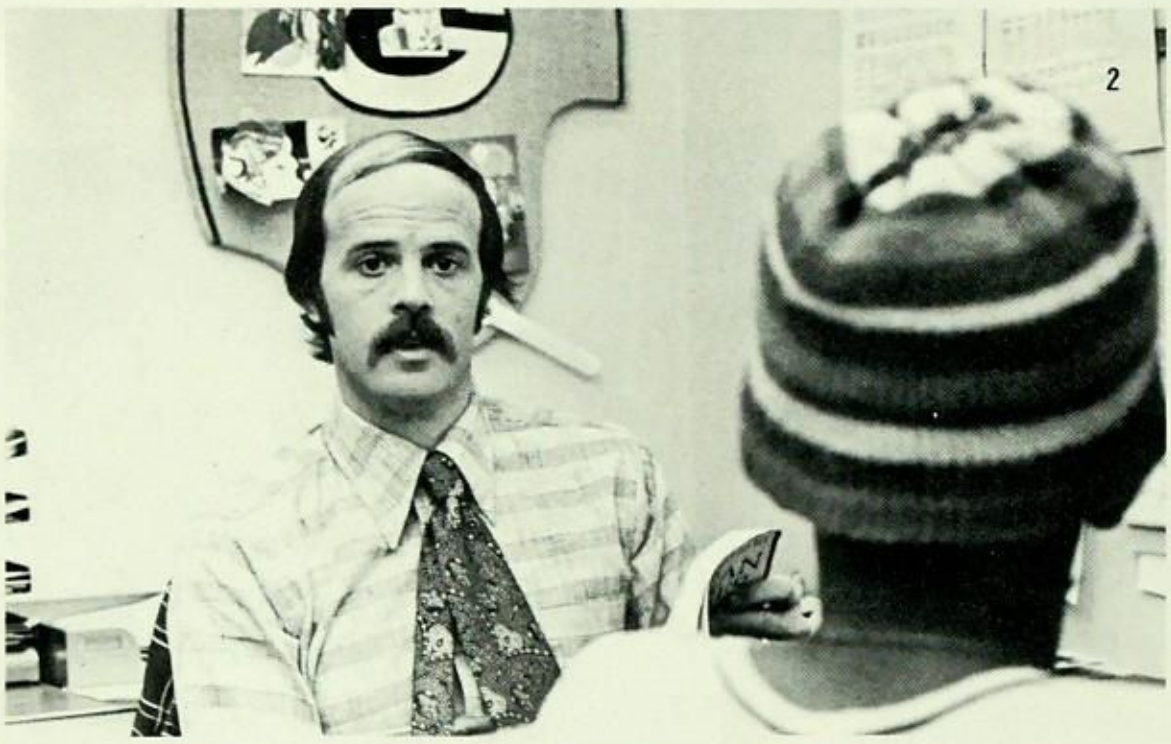
1. John F. Stroupe, Activities Director, checked the files for a club advisor. 2. Answering the phone is a continuing task performed by the office help. 3. Mrs. Audrey Rasmussen kept activity accounts up to date. 4. Larita Winston ran the copy machine in the main office. 5. Paul Jensen and Phil Hageman helped carry some of the donuts sold during the break.

Blue School not only houses guidance counselors, but they also have the service of Mr. Holle, the vocational counselor. All students of Park may call on him when they have questions concerning their vocational opportunities. Under the direction of Mr. Smith, Blue School has always been well organized and well prepared to carry out the many responsibilities that come up daily. They have achieved and maintained an efficient office to serve Park students.



1. Two Blue School T.A.'s worked on homeroom attendance folders. 2. Robert McKee listened to a student's questions. 3. Catherine Miller typed an attendance report. 4. Students prepared to check out of school. 5. Counselors were available to answer students' questions.

1. Virginia Jensen wrote out a list for checking attendance. 2. Checking attendance folders was a daily job. 3. Peg Berg talked with a student about college plans. 4. Roy Holle concentrated on vocational counseling. 5. Warren Smith glanced over the day's mail.

Orange School has always appeared to be one of the busiest of Park's sub-schools. There is usually never a moment when the office is not filled with people who have perplexing problems and are in need of assistance. Mr. McEvoy is always ready to help students with problems and is assisted by a staff of highly competent counselors. Whatever problem you may have, Orange School is always ready to assist you — whatever the trouble, whatever the time.

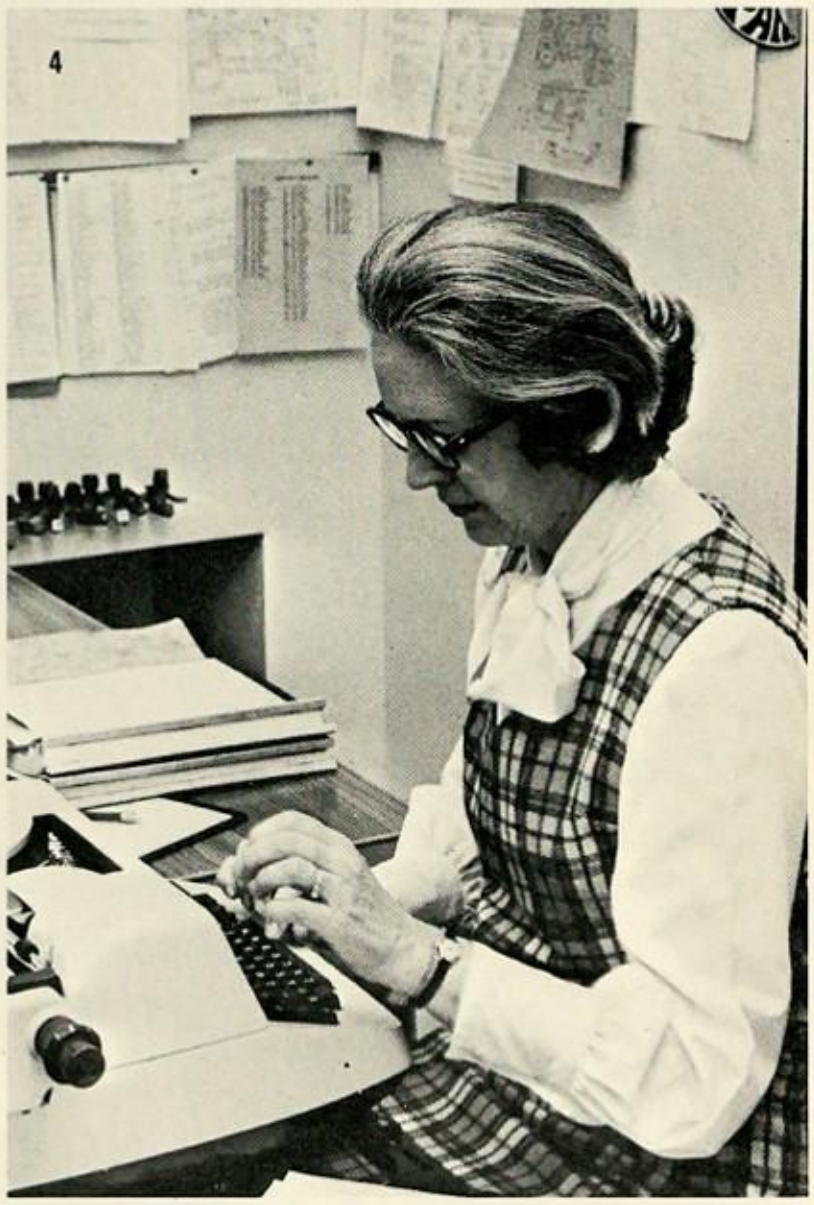
1. The duties of Office T.A.'s included keeping the check-out lists up to date. 2. Robert Holroyd spends many hours preparing students for college. 3. Gene McEvoy planned the schedule of classes for returning students. 4. A student waited to see a counselor while others worked.



1. Florence Banga looked over the absence list. 2. Mary Olsen acted as social worker for all students. 3. Claudette Dunn checked over a class list. 4. Jane Beyer typed out some student referrals. 5. Verna Days talked about her classes with Mrs. Dunn.

White School has had the disadvantage of having the smallest of the sub-school offices, but what they lack in size, they make up for by having an efficient staff serving many students. The principal, Mr. Jackson, has been a great asset to the White School office as well as the complete school. He has often helped people not only in White School but also from other offices as well. At any time of the day, there will probably be many busy people in the White Office.

Through the addition of new curriculum the Science Department now offers all students a variety of classes. In addition to Chemistry, Physics, Biology and Earth Science, they have added Horticulture, Ecology and Man Made World, making science more interesting to more students. Four new mini-courses also offer a change of pace. Students can now spend nine weeks studying Modeling on the Analog Computer, Decision Making, Weather, and Plant and Animal Lab Techniques. Science offers any kind of class students may want, even a chance to travel for a month during the summer learning Earth Science with the Radke Expedition.

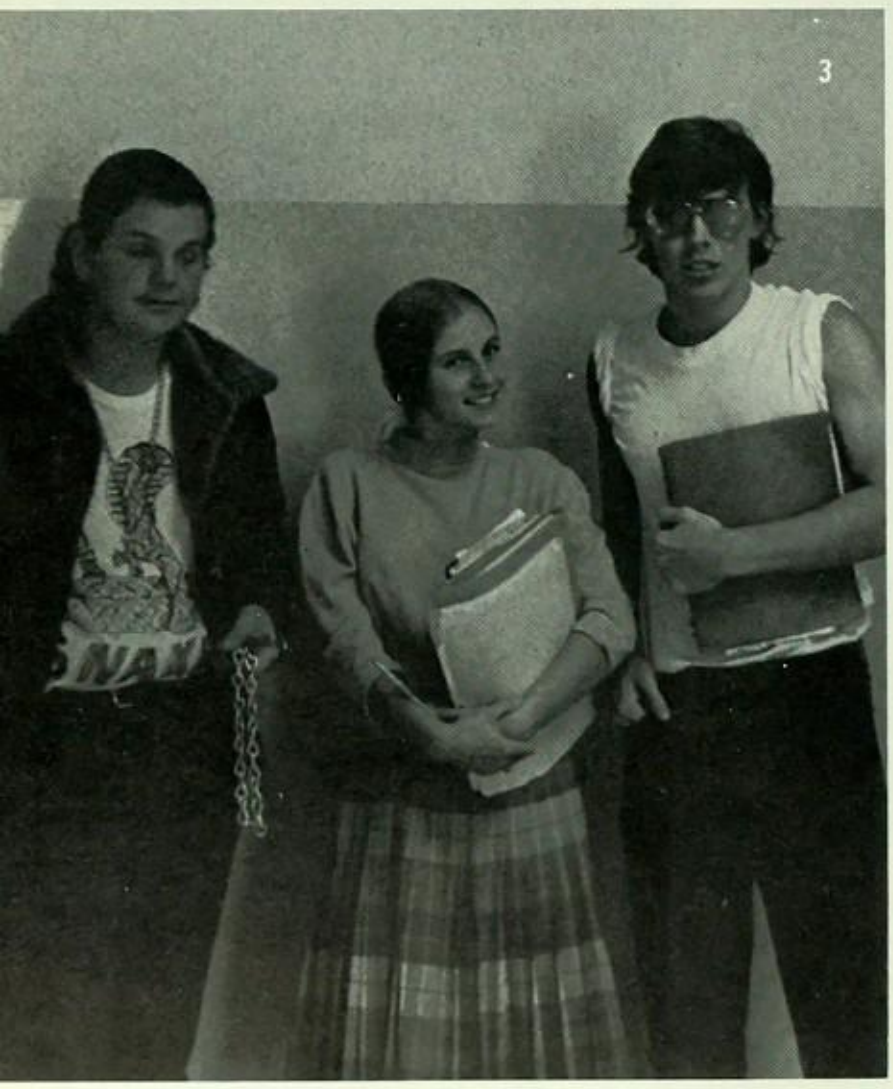
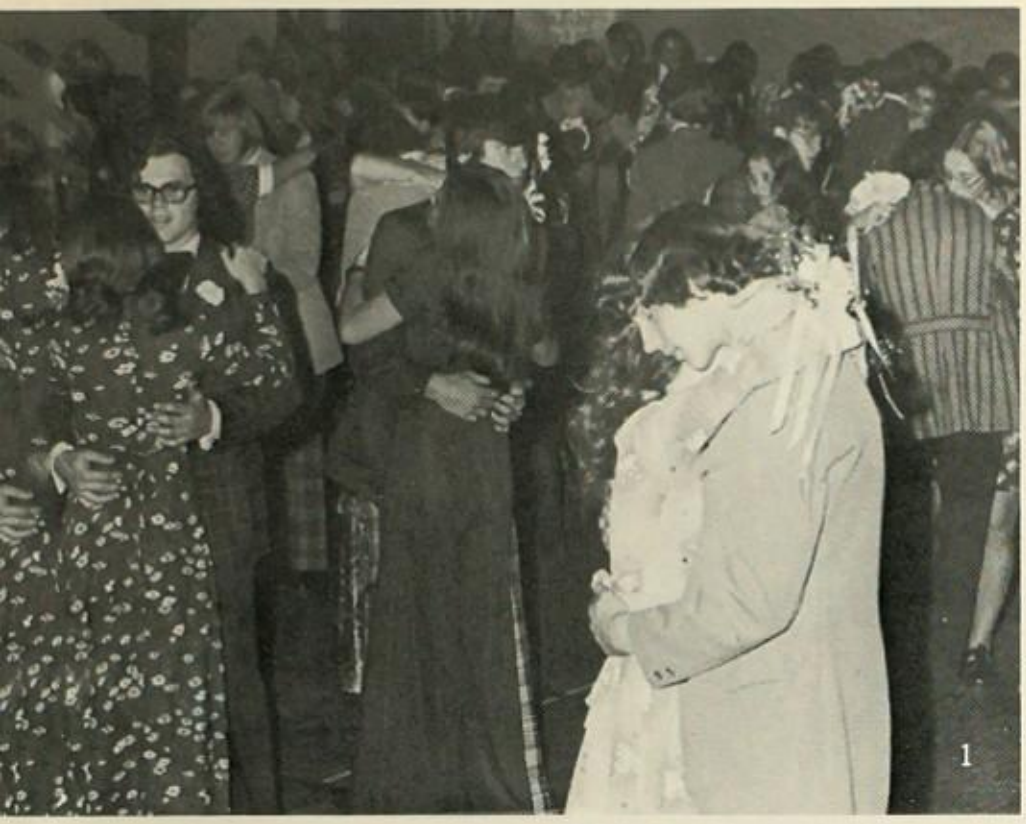
HOMECOMING

Once again Homecoming has come and gone, leaving lasting impressions of excitement from the dance, the game, and the many escapades of Miss Fortune and her gang. This year, the unique idea of various "dress-up" days transformed Park into a raving kindergarten on Little Kid's Day, and into an ecstatic group of bobby soxers on 50's Day.

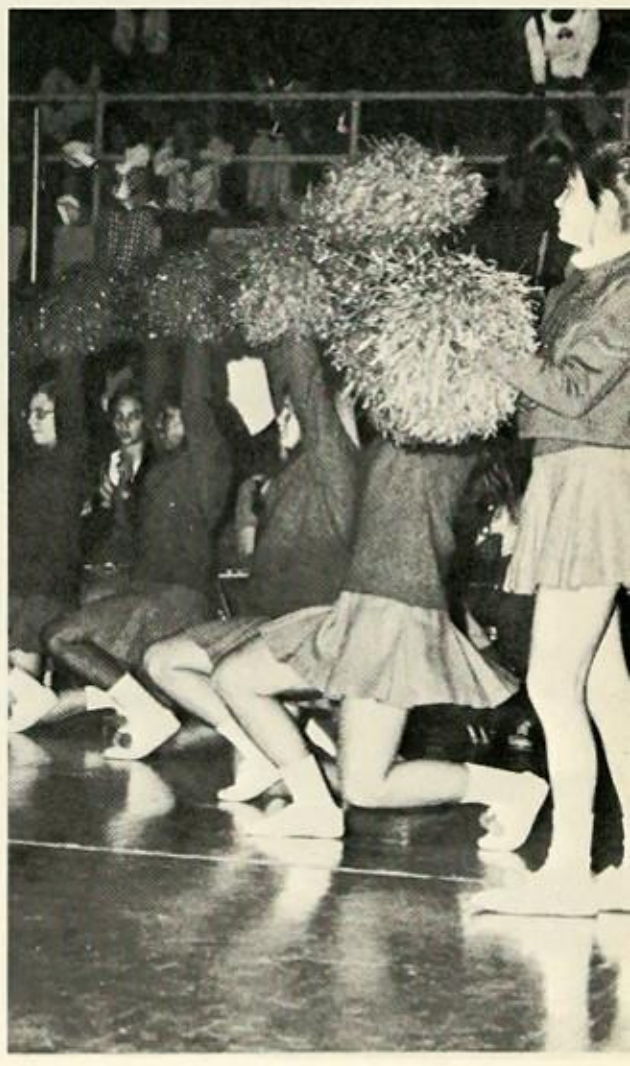
Park came out victorious over Bradford 35-21 and Homecoming week reached its peak at the dance with the crowning of King Paul Bodenbach and Queen Sue LeRose.

1. Students enjoyed making decorations for the dance. 2. Enthusiastic kids displayed their juvenile attire. 3. Park was temporarily brought back in time to the 50's. 4. The Homecoming Court introduced at the Assembly consisted of Sue LeRose and Paul Bodenbach; Gilbert Velasquez and Shawn Turner; Sarah Sauls and Richard Hands; Joan Fergus and Steve Barker; Karen Skowronski and Steve Logic.





1. Couples dressed formally for the Homecoming Dance. 2. Members of the Pep Club displayed their spirit on Kid's Day. 3. Farmer jeans and moonshine jugs were a common sight on Hillbilly Day.



1. Cheering crowds prepared to release victory balloons. 2. Debbie Sorensen displayed chaotic patterns on Mix and Match Day. 3. A Misfortune cop took an unexpected rest. 4. Mr. Fugate joined in on the 50's Day bash.

1. Beacon staffers participated in the parade to the game. 2. Students mounted tables and chairs to observe the Sock Hop. 3. Miss Fortune was temporarily detained by the capering cops. 4. "Take" entertained a crowd at the victory dance. 5. Miss Fortune's activities were ended for another year at the assembly on Friday. 6. Mr. Brian Anderson joined in the spirit of Little Kids Day.

CAMELOT

This year's musical was presented in mid November. Director Tom Spraker was assisted technically by John Burns and musically by Bill Diekhoff and Norm Lanning. The story of King Arthur's dream of the Round Table was enhanced by a cast of 72 including the finely costumed Court and the Sorceress Morgan Le Fey (Laurie Knudson) and her dancers.

1. The cast watched intently during the joust scene. 2. Phil Krikau worked on the set for Camelot. 3. Pellinore (Bob Bohm) and his faithful dog explained their presence in Camelot to Guenevere (Laura Adams). 4. Mordred (Jim Kothe) revealed his Character through the song, "Those Seven Deadly Virtues."

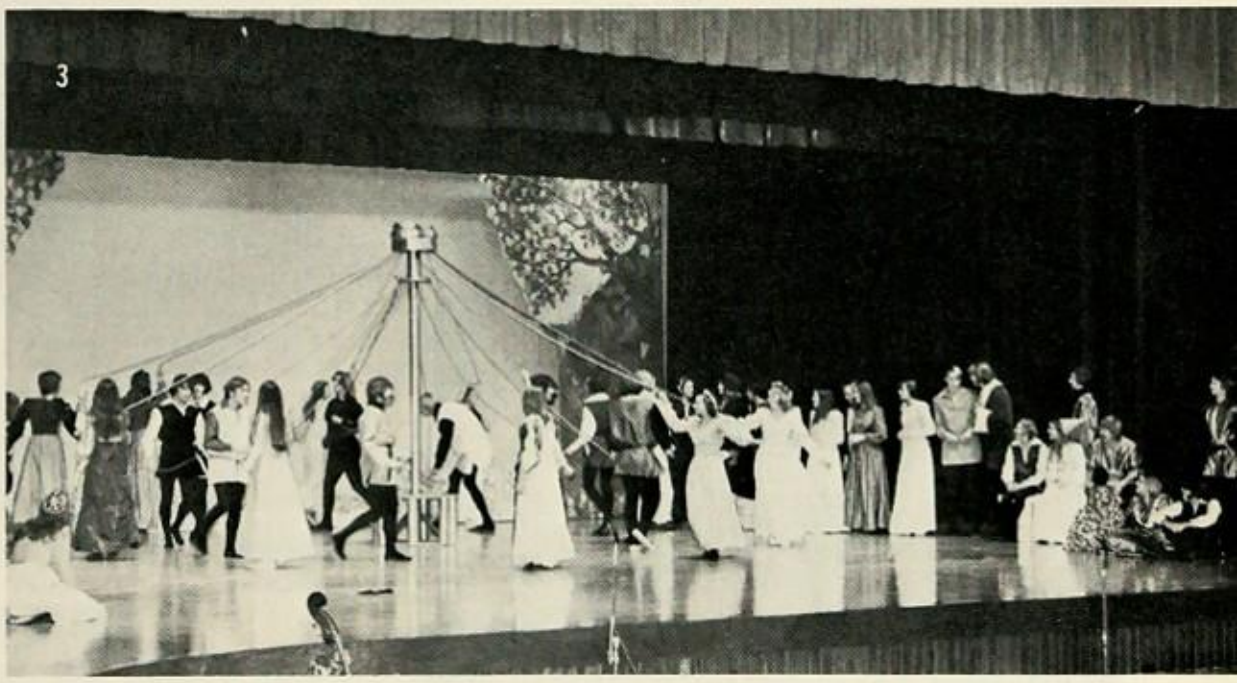
1. An abandoned May pole stood silent backstage. 2. Arthur (Matt Schliesman) and Guenevere discussed the good points of Camelot in the opening scene of the musical. 3. The Cast danced during the "Lusty Month of May". 4. Lancelot (Dennis Franklin) came from France to serve on King Arthur's Court. 5. Morgan LeFey's court built an invisible wall.



Music has played a major part in the activities of Park students as long as one can remember. Under the guidance of Norman Lanning and Bill Diekhoff, music students have gained more than just basic instruction; they have been given a respect and appreciation for music which cannot simply be learned out of a book. Year after year, musicians from Park have entered various competitions and have come out winners. Music students have also shown their talents through the annual musical productions. One has only to attend any one of the concerts offered during the year to realize that the Music department is a great asset to Park High.

1. John Dorsey directed the Jazz Ensemble during a practice. 2. Nancy Neilsen played bass while in concert. 3. Flute players concentrated on their music during a Winter Concert.

1. Concentration helped students to make the concerts successful. 2. The band performed many times in concert.

The Drama department played an important role in the activity program, and was repaid by applause from Park audiences. Not only did Mr. Burns and Mr. Spraker concentrate on performances, but they also offered classes in stagecraft, acting, makeup, and speech. Many students participated in the fall musical, Camelot, as cast, chorus, and crew members. The heartwarming play "A Raisin in the Sun" was directed by Marilyn Baldwin as an introduction to Black History Week. The spring play Spoon River Anthology concluded the 1973-74 Drama season. Widespread student participation was the measure of the Drama department's success.

Home Economics helps the student prepare for various aspects of family life. The essentials are taught with regard to the students' interests, and courses for advanced study are also available. Modern homemaking techniques are taught in relation to the student's future with careful consideration given to the student who is anticipating a career in Home Economics. New classes have been introduced this year, one of which deals with bachelor survival. Home Economics courses will aid students, male or female, with their personal lives now and with their family life later.

1. Marsha Sarles, Mira Small, and Dotti Anderson tested some pancakes made by students. 2. Washing dishes was also part of the Foods class activities. 3. Part of Bachelor Survival included showing boys the basics of sewing. 4. A Foods Class worked on menu planning.

1. Students were able to taste test their own food. 2. Kathleen Stroud and Janice Hock examined some of their students' work. 3. Helen Wood and Shirley Blegen assisted a student with her sewing. 4. Karen Skowronski hemmed her dress. 5. Cameron Cagle was distracted from his sewing assignment.

The Park High Art Department offers students a wide variety of classes to choose from including Basic Art, Two Dimensional Art, and an Art Survey Course. All students have a chance to have their art pieces exhibited through out the city. During American Education Week paintings were displayed at the American Bank and Trust Company downtown. Other art pieces were also shown at Zahn's Department Store. In May works by some sixty Park students were shown at Wustum Art Museum. In June the annual art sale was held with the proceeds going to the Art Scholarship Fund. Art is one of the oldest forms of appreciation and the Art Department holds strong to that tradition.

The never ending task of keeping a school running efficiently is handled by the custodians, cafeteria staff, and the hall monitors. They work towards the same goal, making a better environment for Park students. Keeping the halls clean, repairing faulty equipment, and keeping the school warm are just a few jobs handled by the custodians in the building to maintain pleasant atmosphere. The cafeteria staff works each day bringing students appetizing food which will also help them nutritionally. With the addition of the Rainbow Lunch program, students should be able to enjoy a wider selection of food. Patrolling Park's halls helps keep the school safer and rids the halls of unwanted visitors and keeps the students in class. The hall monitors try to keep the students moving smoothly in the hallways with their patrolling. It would be very difficult for Park to run efficiently without the many people responsible for maintaining the school.

Self-expression and reading comprehension are both fundamentals which everyone should possess. The English department strives to reach these goals through a wide variety of course offerings varying in both scope and difficulty. English allows the student to delve into the mind of man, worlds of fantasy, and vastly different human experiences. Courses such as World Literature, Shakespeare, Mass Media, and Advanced English challenge the student's creativity and allow him to improve language skills. The study of English at Park High is very worthwhile and significant to all areas of study.

Industrial Arts has always been a department which focuses on the students' needs. When offered courses concerning drafting, graphic arts, woodworking, or power mechanics, a student may take a look at industry from a small scale. Actually working in the shop may help the students receive a job in industry which will enhance their careers. For the student not interested in industry, these classes provide him with the opportunity to be creative and to learn interesting skills.

The Foreign Language Department at Park has attempted to combine modern teaching methods with basic reading, writing, and speaking skills. Students in the language program gain an excellent background in either French, German, or Spanish. The Language lab allows the student to practice speaking orally and at the same time learn by hearing his mistakes. In addition, reading materials familiarize him with the cultural aspects related to his language. All in all, knowledge of a foreign language expands appreciation of foreign cultures and increases one's communicative abilities.

Mathematics is very useful to all students since it is used in virtually every vocation and in our daily lives. Courses at Park range from refresher Math to Calculus and enable the student to extend knowledge and skills he has already learned. In addition to classroom work, the Math Department has been successful in math contests. Two teams representing Park placed first and fourth in competition at Prairie School this year. Mathematics is able to help you think clearly and logically as well as serve as a base for many possible careers.

Helping students has always been one of the more satisfying tasks that the librarians perform. With the aid of books, magazines, newspapers, and audio-visual equipment, the questions and problems presented by the students are answered more easily and efficiently. Students who do have trouble with reading or comprehension are referred to a reading specialist or a special education instructor. These specialists help not only students but also aid teachers with any such related reading problems they may have encountered among their classes. Student tutors and specialists are able to relate to the students on an individual basis and make significant headway in reading skills. The school nurse also deals with Park students on an individual level. She deals with any health problems that may arise and can recommend solutions.

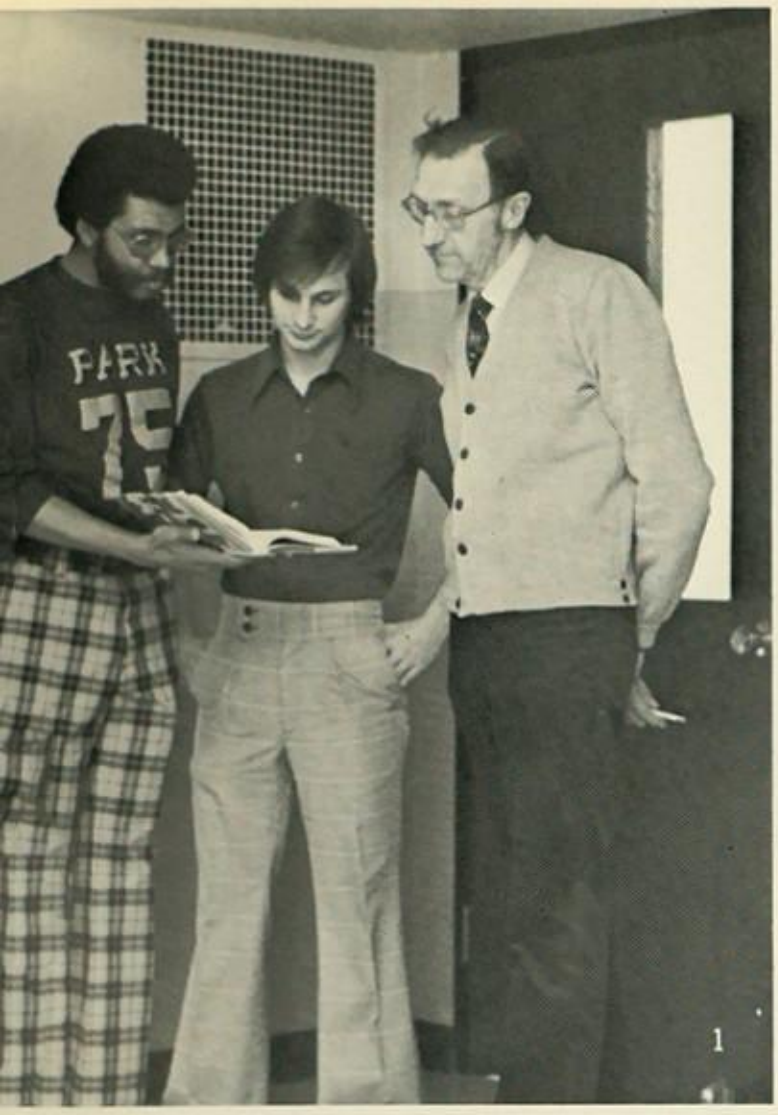
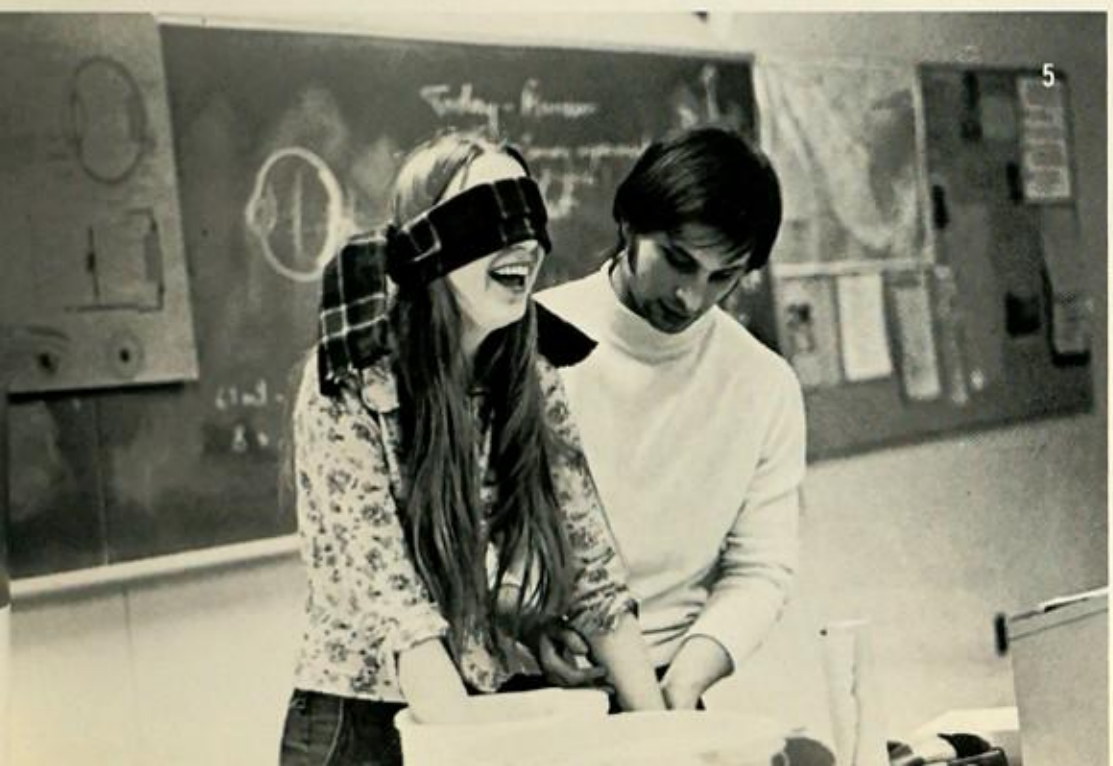
Youth for Understanding — Denmark
Ronald McWhorter

Social studies relates directly to life itself and helps develop a sense of social awareness. Through learning about other periods in history, one can come to better understand various types of governments and also to cope more effectively with the contemporary problems of society. This year at Park, active participation has been included as another approach to learning. An anthropological "dig" and political campaign activity have been two such alternatives. In order for people to live together in peace, they must have an understanding and respect for each other's politics and culture. Social Studies encourages these ideals.

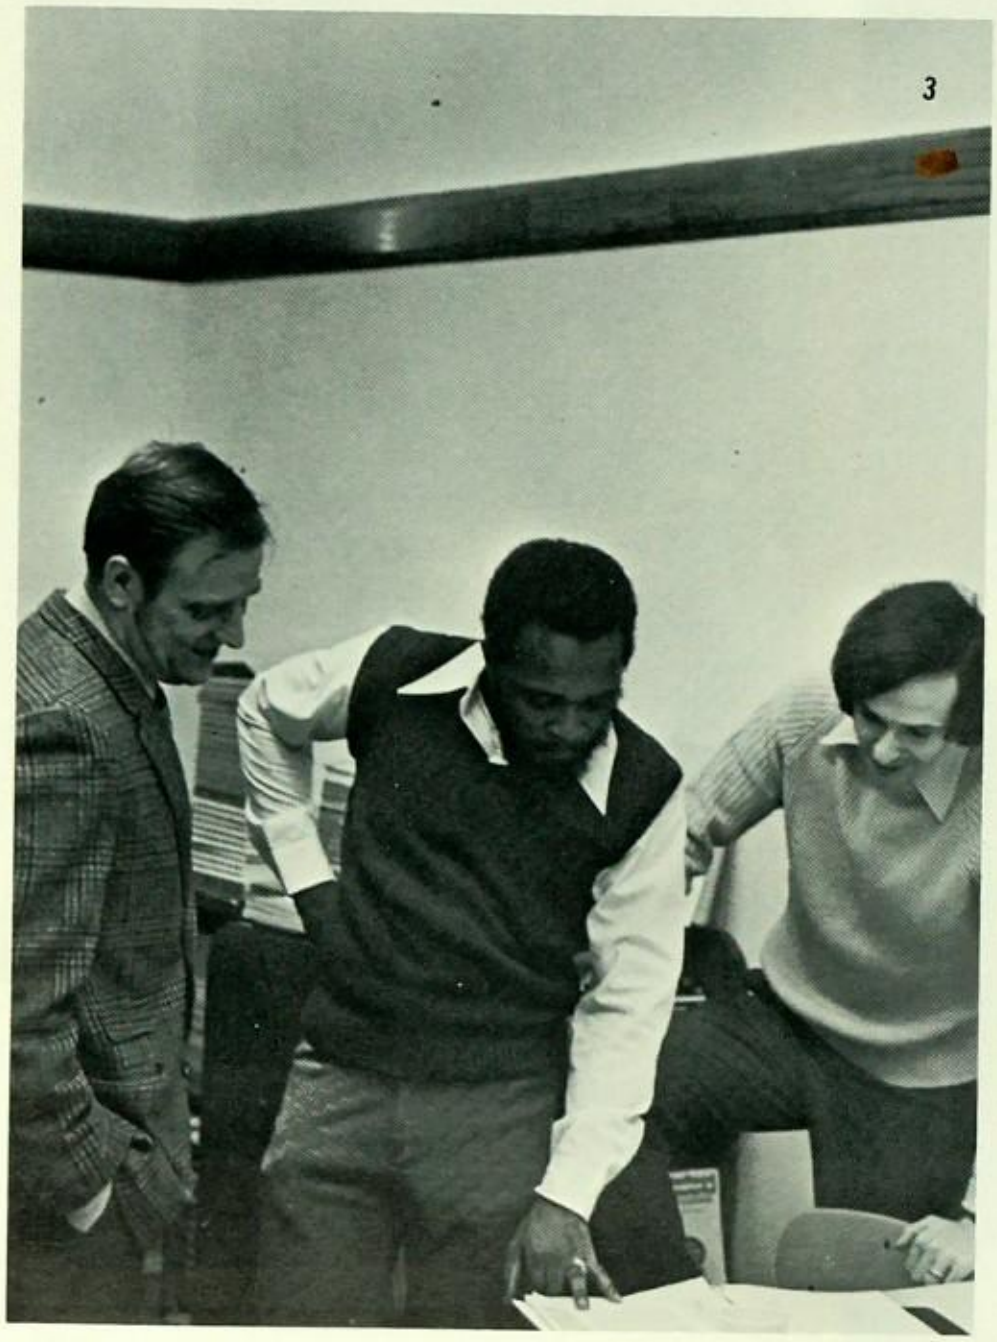
1. Betty Biesiada, Lenore Burckel, and Ralph McIntosh teamed up to lead a discussion in Economics. 2. Darlene Greenwood kept the Social Studies Resource Room in good humor. 3. Anthropology students went on a digging expedition in Washington Park. 4. Ruth Baumann and Nancy Stretti posed in front of various plants in room 229.



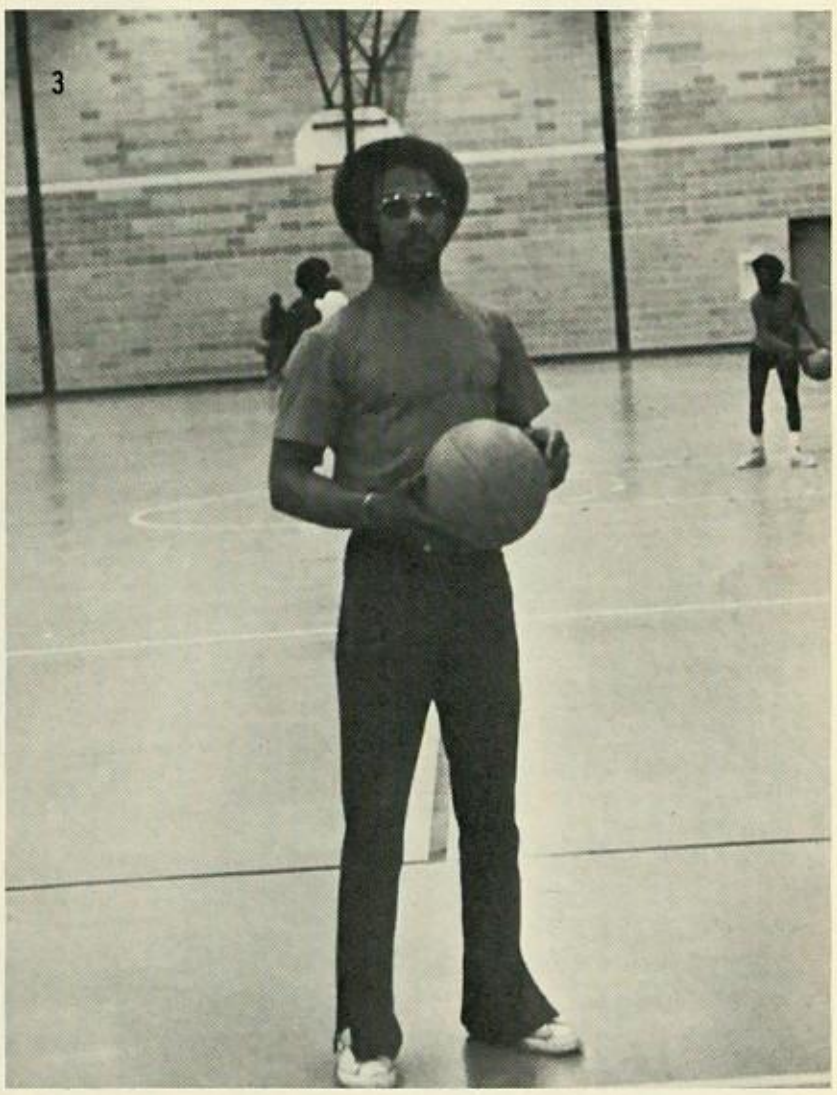


1. Ron Griffin, Steve Belknap, and William Andersen discussed some reading materials to be used in classes. 2. Mr. Lipari discussed an assignment with his students. 3. Mr. McIntosh had students working on independent study projects. 4. Mike Langton and Larry Larson prepared a movie for Sport History. 5. Mr. Belknap used a variety of techniques to get his ideas across to psychology students.

1. Various artifacts were found from the Anthropology Diggings. 2. Jim Eastman, Doug Lockrem, and Joe Sanders posed in a precarious position. 3. Richard Kizewic, Bob Hayes, and Joe Lipari looked over their class outlines. 4. Sophomore Social Studies students were given a large variety of classes to choose from. 5. Mr. Griffin lectured psychology students.



The Physical Education Department not only helps students keep in shape but also encourages good sportsmanship. Basic courses such as swimming, basketball, and weight training are offered along with practical classes of Camping and Basic Survival, Gun Safety, and Bait Casting. Gym classes also provide a recreational release from the structured schedule of an average school day. They promote participation, and they initiate understanding and support of competitive school sports as well. Park's Physical Education Department offers many choices to students with sport interests ranging from simple enjoyment to inter-school competition.



1. Dale Schroeder, Don Gardner, and Charles Smith were pleased with students' progress. 2. The field house was open during noon hours, allowing students to play basketball. 3. Don Price specialized in helping students with individual problems. 4. Kathy Odau and Linda Haas smiled while discussing future classes.

1. Racketball was a sport enjoyed by the girls gym class. 2. Charlotte Schwartz and Pat Folsom found a few spare moments to talk over future classes. 3. Charles Ellis and Bert Brown discussed student participation in Phy Ed Class. 4. Chris Lichtenwalner and Jim Widmar teamed up for doubles in Ping Pong. 5. Girls were introduced to the fundamentals of basketball.

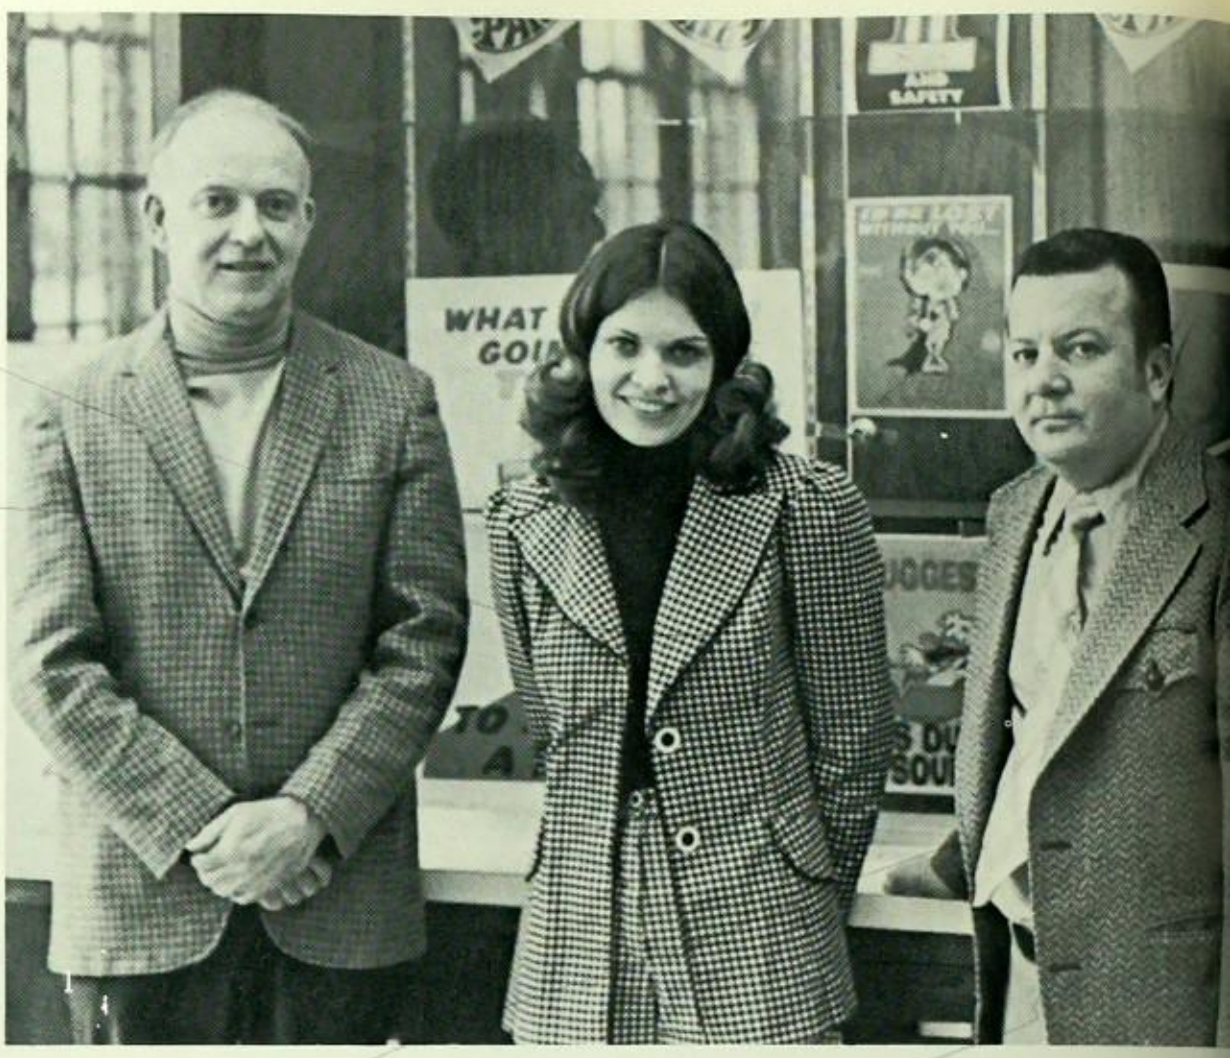
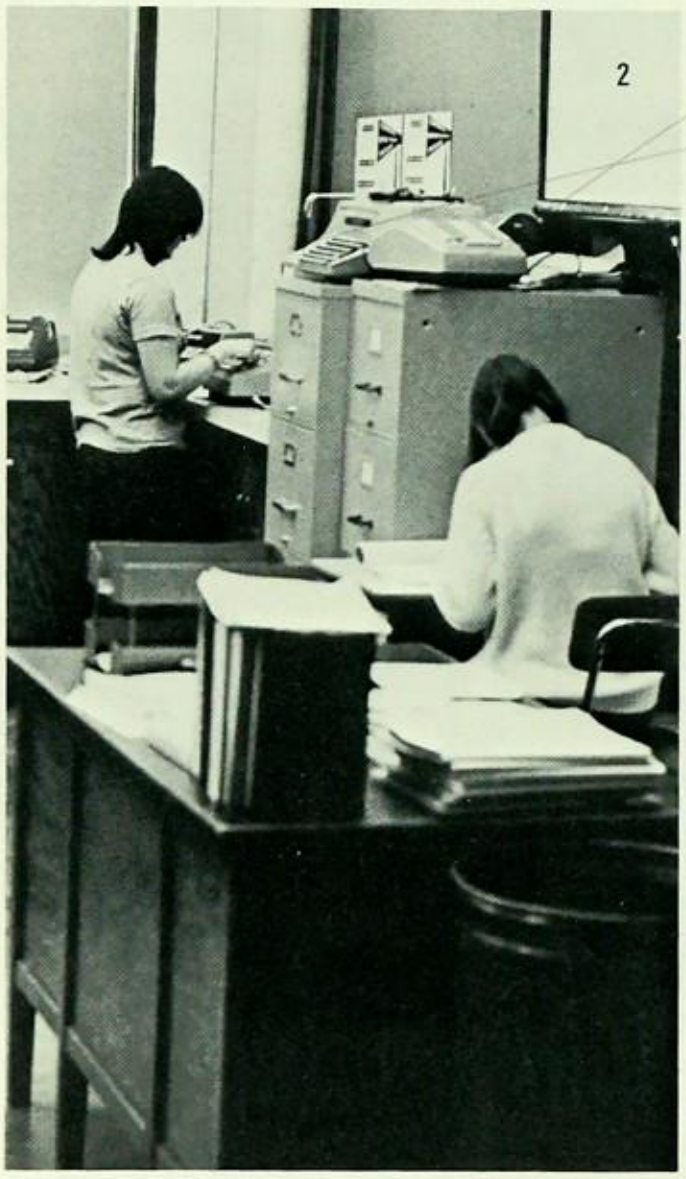
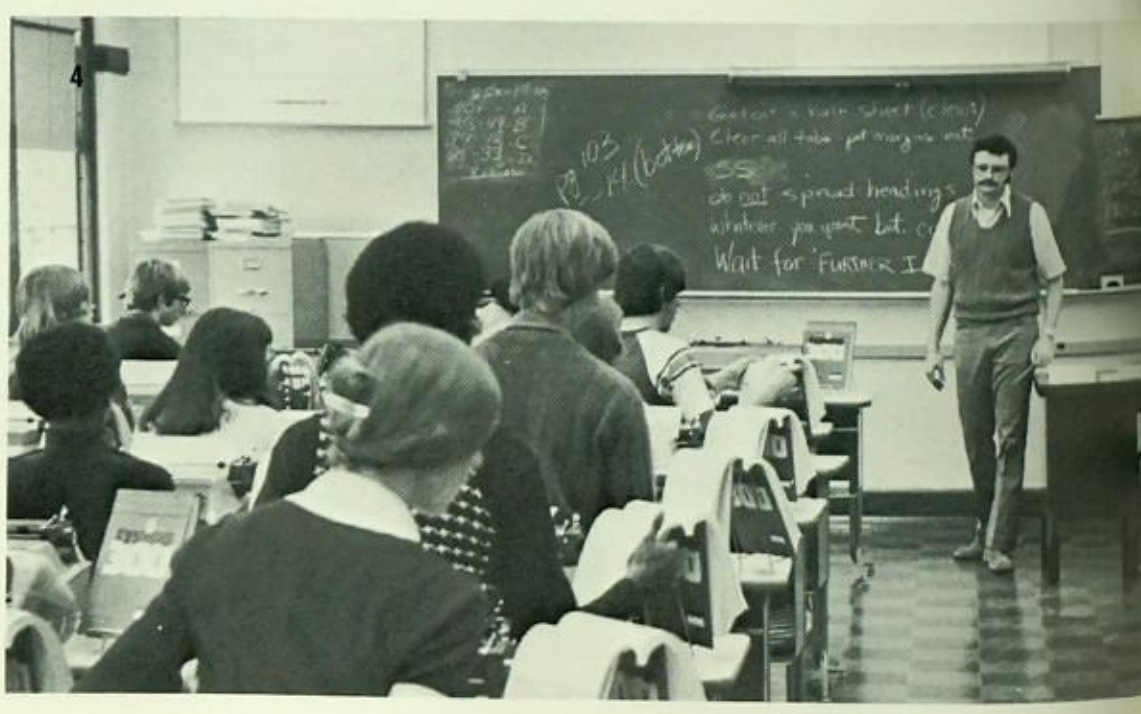
1. Badminton proved to be both difficult and fun. 2. Mr. Brown demonstrated a swimming stroke. 3. Deana Bigley and Betty Craig stopped for a moment in the hall near their homerooms. 4. Tom Manchester and George Talsma talked about the coming baseball season. 5. John Phelan corrected some tests for Driver Education.

Business Education has always served as a tie between students and the business world and has given the student a much better understanding of modern business practices. Careers in Business Education can help students become competent wage earners beyond High School. Through the guidance of the teachers, the student is made aware of the skills that are needed to become part of the growing economic world. The inclusion of Business Education into the schedules of many students has given them many beneficial learning experiences as well as a sound foundation for life as a consumer.







1. Tom Taylor, Kathryn Baas, and Charles Kesten posed in front of the DECA display case. 2. Record keeping students figured out their problems with the aid of adding machines. 3. Diane Barton worked on a difficult problem. 4. Mr. Peterson helped students improve their typing.

1. Rose Hernandez was ready for another day of typing. 2. Jim Peterson, Janice Doyle, and Roger Degerman specialized in typing, record keeping, and notetaking for Business Ed. 3. Brian Anderson and Lyle Johnson conferred about the various courses students can take. 4. Mr. Taylor used a variety of equipment to get his ideas to the students. 5. Record keeping took a great deal of concentration.

This year the Coalition Cabinet has again proved to play an important part in the government of Park High. Administrators, faculty, parents, and students met bi-monthly to exchange ideas on current issues concerning the students at Park and tried to develop solutions to any problems which may have arisen. The committees also dealt with ideas from the class councils and recommended programs such as the Rainbow Lunch System and a new approach to student elections. In addition to taking action on certain projects, Coalition Cabinet has served to create a better understanding amongst the people who comprise Park High.

DEATH
touches us all-
making no exceptions; a life of seasons
inevitably must come to an end.
But even though
GONE,
they will eternally exist
in our fond memories of the pastnever to be forgotten.

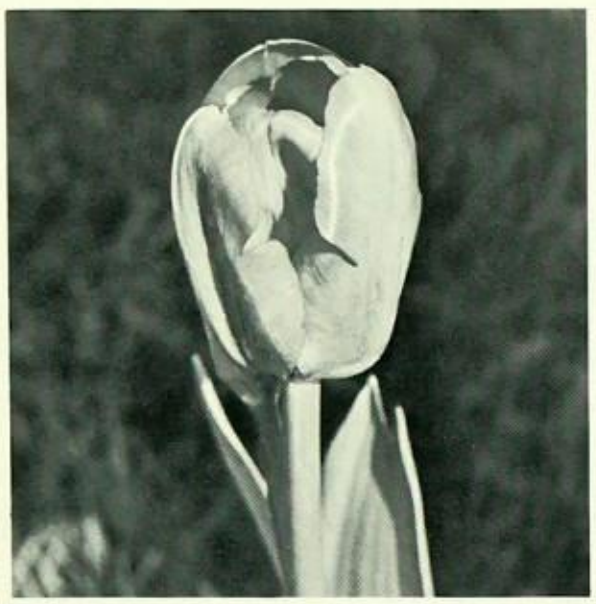
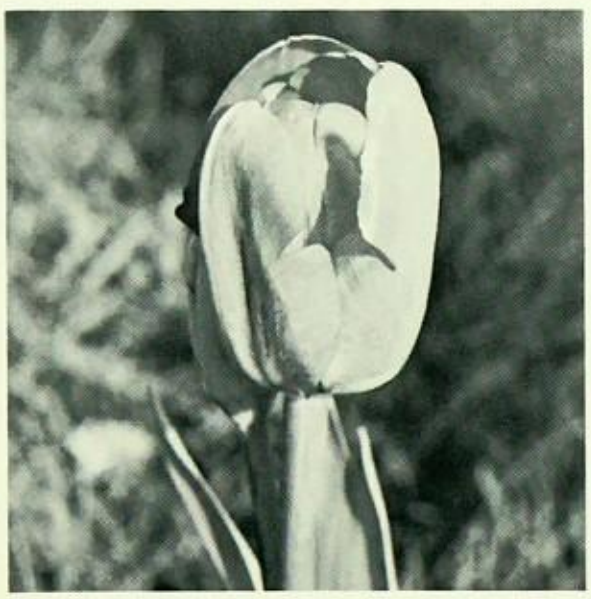
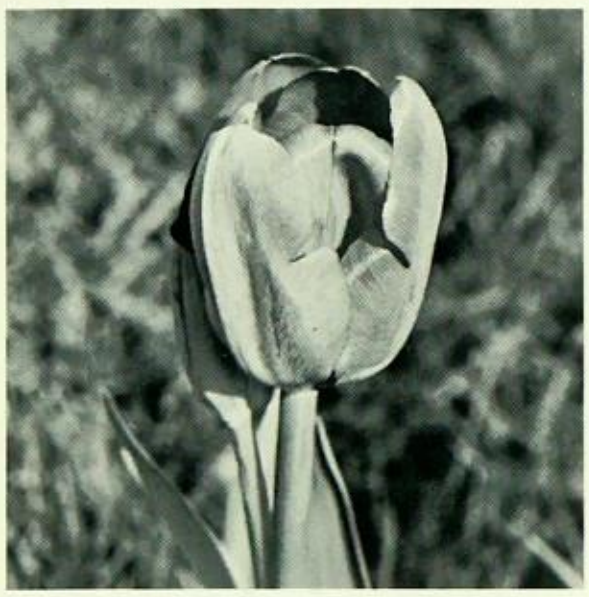
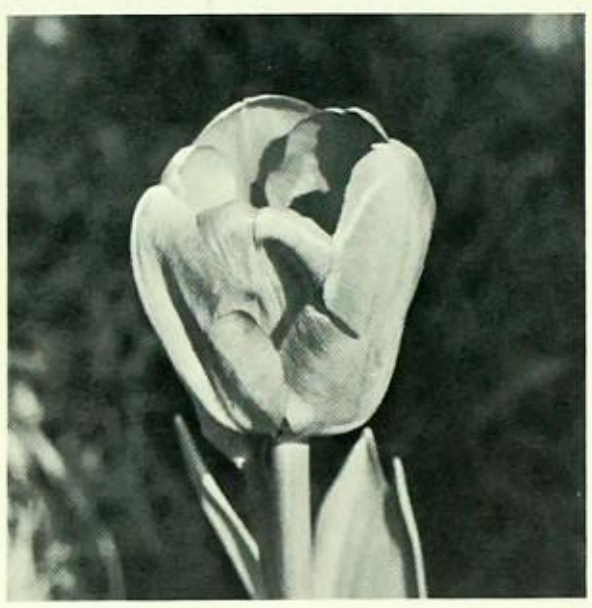
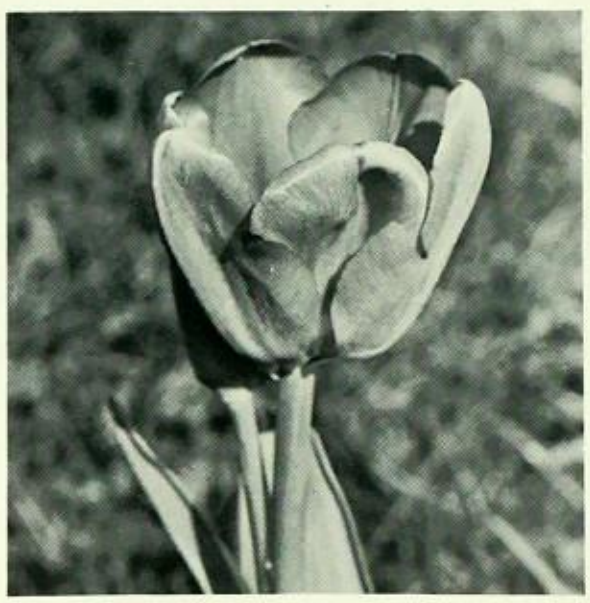
Few people knew all three of these people since they were at Park at different times, but each will be remembered by many friends. LeRoy Ludeman was Principal at Park from 1956 to 1970. Thousands will remember his interest in students and his concern for important values in education. Ed Lancour was a custodian at Park for nine years, friendly and helpful to staff and students alike. Maryjane Calderon spent her sophomore year at Park, making several classes richer with her friendly manner and lively comments.











The 1974 Kipi, under the direction of co-editors CAROL LARRABEE and JOHN WOSYK, acknowledges the help of many people. WILLIAM HALLIDAY of Charles Studio provided our individual class pictures and most of our athletic team and large club pictures. ROD WILLIAMS, American Yearbook Co. representative, offered advice, ideas and a link to the technicalities of publishing and spent many hours helping JOHN WOSYK slice up tiny color pictures for the division pages. By the time the cover progressed from idea to final form, credit had to be given to a committee: PETER DESCHLER, CAROL LARRABEE, JEFF WILTSEY, JOHN WOSYK, and ROD ZIOLKOWSKI. The endsheet and supplement cover were based on a screen print designed by PAULA FELGENHAUER. Color photography, retouching and other photographic schemes were masterminded by JEFF WILTSEY. BOB BOHM was responsible for the calendar supplement, and he and ROD ZIOLKOWSKI aided the community advertising staff. BARB WILLIS, JUANITA MARTINEZ, and ALICIA KOCH did much of the work on the index. SCOTT PEDERSEN was Publications Business Manager, GLEN HASSEL kept the photo drawer in order and GORDON STEIMLE was the scapegoat when any problems arose. JAMES RUNGE helped the student photographers and was conned into subbing for JUDY DAVIES as adviser during Easter vacation. Other Kipi staff members who had major responsibilities included: SARAH SAULS, Copy; STEPHEN PETERSEN, Faculty and class pages; KIM LIERTZ and ROBERTA NELSON, Senior section; TOM GAVAHAN, Underclass sections; DOUG KOYKKARI and RANDY WOLF, Sports; and JOANN LOSCHENKOHL and BOB STOUGAARD, Advertising.
